MARINES ATTACK JAPS REMAINING ON GUADALCANAL

Effective Patrol Action Carried Out Against Nipponese Forces

HEAVY LOSSES INFLECTED ON FOE'S CONCENTRATIONS

Enemy Routed Out Despite Uncanny Ability At Concealment

EDITOR'S NOTE: The navy department at Washington released Saturday the following account of a marine patrol action in the Solomons written by a marine corps combat correspondent.

By Sergeant James W. Hurtubise, Guadalcanal, Aug. 19 (Delayed).—One of the most determined and effective patrol actions yet attempted against the Japanese forces remaining on Guadalcanal has just been completed.

Colonel W. J. Whaling of Washington, D. C., directed the action in which several companies of marines drove down on Japanese concentration points and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

The plan of attack was as follows: Company "X," commanded by Captain William L. Hawkins of Bridgeport, Conn., moved along the beach road that leads from Kukum.

Company "Y," commanded by Captain R. W. Hardy, Jr., of Toledo, Ohio, was assigned to lead the Japanese camp. Colonel Whaling accompanied this group.

Company "Z," under Captain Lyman Sprick of Lincoln, Neb., penetrated deep into the jungle and assaulted the fortified enemy positions.

Company "A," made the main contact and wiped out the Jap forces. Other companies helped make the action a success by keeping the Jap troops occupied until Captain Sprick's men had maneuvered into attacking position.

The attack was scheduled for this morning, but Company "Z" had its first action late yesterday when it came upon a Jap patrol in the jungle.

JAPANESE LOSE 20 MORE PLANES

That Number Shot Down In Efforts To Oust Americans In Solomons

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Continued efforts by the Japanese to dislodge United States forces from the Solomons have cost the enemy 15 bombers and five fighter planes in addition to previous losses, the navy announced today.

Enemy destroyers have joined the Japanese effort in an effort to oust the marines from the Guadalcanal and Tulagi area but their shelling has caused no damage.

On three days, September 9-11, enemy bombers escorted by Zero fighters, planes, could not over Guadalcanal. United States fighters shot down six bombers and one fighter.

The third raid included another 26 bombers with fighter escorts. United States fighters shot down six more bombers and one fighter.

American dive bombers were active September 11 against enemy installations.

WOMACK TO APPEAL COMMITTEE RULING

BATON ROUGE, Sept. 12.—(AP)—District Judge James D. Womack, whose decisions have crippled many laws enacted during the administration of Governor Sam Jones, announced today through counsel that he would appeal a decision of the East Baton Rouge parish Democratic committee which held the he had been eliminated in Tuesday's primary.

The committee, meeting today, declared unanimously that District Judge Charles A. Holcombe and W. Carroll Jones, former district judge, had been nominated for the two judicial posts here.

Results of the voting as announced by the committee gave Holcombe 8,025, Jones 7,855, Womack 7,530 and City Judge Leslie A. Fitch 5,280. Each of the first three candidates received a majority and Womack said he would take the case to the supreme court if necessary on a contention that he was entitled to a second primary race with Jones.

Chairman J. Russell Doiron read opinions of Attorney General Eugene Stanley and Chairman Frank J. Looney, Shreveport, of the state Democratic central committee, holding that Holcombe and Jones should be declared nominees.

Allied Bombers Strike Heavily At Base At Buna

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Sunday, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Allied heavy and medium bombers, escorted by fighters, struck one of the heaviest blows yet delivered in the Pacific yesterday when they blasted the Japanese invasion base, Buna, in eastern New Guinea with 26 tons of bombs and more than 28,000 rounds of cannon and machine gun fire, a communiqué said today.

In four bombing attacks, followed by sea strafing runs, the Allied airmen destroyed at least 17 Japanese planes on the ground, in dispersal bays and on the runway of an air-drome from which the enemy had been operating in the drive against Port Moresby.

All anti-aircraft positions in the area were silenced, the communiqué said.

Meanwhile, there was little action in the Owen Stanley mountains where the Japanese have advanced to little more than 40 miles from Port Moresby, the high Allied base.

Owen Stanley action was limited to patrol activity, the communiqué said.

The attack on Buna was a continuation of a series aimed at smashing the supporting base for troops operating in the Owen Stanley range. It was from here that the Japanese pushed westward to Kokoda, the jump off place for last week's drive.

Yesterday's attack started at dawn with a Flying Fortress raid and was followed by flights of medium bombers and attack planes in a combined action.

The attack planes after dropping their bombs strafed the air-drome at low level in conjunction with fighters.

DEFENSE HOUSES ARE AUTHORIZED

170 More Residences For Monroe Will Be Erected Immediately

To meet the acute housing situation in the Monroe area, the national housing administration has just established a quota of 170 title six defense houses for the city to be erected at once, it was announced at the Chamber of Commerce Saturday.

Also in addition, there is the quota already existing of 38 houses which will make the total 208 to be erected. The houses are to be built to rent and for sale to defense workers, military personnel and civilians employed at the A. F. Navigation school here.

They will cost from $1,600 to $6,000 and will carry rentals from $32.50 to $45 monthly.

F. L. Bailey, state director of FHA, will come to Monroe for a meeting to be held in the Chamber of Commerce here Monday at 10:30 a. m. for purpose of allocating priorities on houses to local operating builders. All interested contractors are invited to attend this meeting.

A majority of the houses will be erected in the Sherwood addition, which is in easy walking distance from the local air base, which is regarded as essential because of the limited local transportation facilities.

Local builders are keenly interested in the announcement, it was stated Saturday and are expected to welcome the meeting with Mr. Bailey and arranging for the start of much needed construction.

These houses as built will probably compromise all that will be erected here for the duration, stated George D. Holland, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. He states that in normal times, 150 houses a year are erected in Monroe and that the proposed new construction will not by any means overbuild the city, so that there may be no fear entertained lest we have a "ghost city" here at the termination of the war.

BRITISH ADVANCE TOWARD CAPITAL OF MADAGASCAR

Reported Only 70 Miles From Tananarive After 130-Mile Advance

SLIGHT RESISTANCE FROM VICHY ARMY ENCOUNTERED

French Forces Hinder March Somewhat By Destroying Bridges

LONDON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—British forces pushing inland from the Maingona landing on Madagascar were reported only 70 miles from Tananarive today after a 130-mile advance, but French reports said "the enemy" had been engaged on route with "very heavy losses" inflicted and that the going would be tougher over 200 intervening barriers before the capital.

The "considerable progress" reported by the first communiqué from the British East African command said the drive had carried to the great bridge over the Betanoka river but that a concurrent overland advance from the north had been slowed by the French destruction of bridges.

The Vichy troops, mostly concentrated outside the capital, made their stand at the confluence of the Ikopa and Betanoka rivers where the British forces must turn up the Ikopa valley to reach Tananarive by the best route, the French said.

The first battle was joined yesterday in the vicinity of Maevatanana, some 30 miles down the road from Majunga, where the British made one of their three major west coast landings. Thursday and advanced swiftly with negligible opposition.

A broadcast from Tananarive, heard at Port Louis on the British island of Mauritius east of Madagascar, was less sanguine than the reports from Vichy, declaring the French "still were resisting" at 9:30 a. m. today and at 3:30 p. m. a detachment of our troops still is holding out at Maevatanana.

The British will have to overcome some 200 barriers stretched across their path between Maevatanana and Tananarive.

Victoria Cross Is Awarded To Dead-End Kid

NEWCASTLE, England, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A 14-year-old boy, a dead-end kid in a dingy industrial district of Newcastle and the most troublesome of a widowed mother's 13 sons, even when he grew up and went off to war she told him bluntly that she would not miss him.

But today his death dwelling is one of the proudest homes in England for the first mayor of Newcastle and his entourage called there to pay respects to Adam's widow and their 3-year-old daughter.

The lord mayor told the widow she would find solace in her loss in the knowledge that Adam died in gallantry, so outstanding that he won the Victoria Cross, Britain's most coveted war decoration.

Adam was with the Durham light infantry at Matruh in the Libyan desert. In one of his letters home he wrote his mother, "I am sorry for all the trouble I caused you—you said you would not miss me but you will."

The enemy attacked his anti-tank gun. All Adam's crew mates were killed or wounded. Adam's own left arm was almost blown off but, unharmed, he loaded and fired his gun five times. Wounded again, he dragged himself back to fire still another time when a direct hit smashed the gun and killed him.

What probably would have given Adam satisfaction equal to his death was his mother's forgiveness.

"He was a wild lad," she said, "but there never was any real harm in him."

"He was right when he said I would miss him."

SPECIAL MEETING OF PARDON BOARD SET

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A special meeting of the Louisiana state board of pardons has been called for 10:30 a. m. Thursday in the capitol at Baton Rouge to consider the applications for clemency of two negroes sentenced to death for murder whose execution dates have been set by Governor Sam H. Jones.

The negroes are George L. Iles of Caddo parish, 22, sentenced to be executed October 1 for the killing of W. B. Jacobs, special police officer in Shreveport November 14 and Clifton Guillory, 20, of Calcasieu parish, sentenced for execution September 24 for the killing of Eugene Guidry, January 14.

Jacobs was killed in the negro Odd Fellows' home in Shreveport where he was assigned to keep order and Guidry was shot down when he intervened as Guillory was threatening to kill a negro woman, the records showed.

Voluntary Gasoline Rationing Is Sought

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Price Administrator Leon Henderson tonight asked motorists in unrationed areas to place themselves voluntarily under the same gasoline and mileage rationing controls now in force in the 17 Eastern states.

Declaring that it would be several weeks before coupon rationing books could be printed to carry out the nationwide gas rationing recommended by the Baruch rubber committee, Henderson cautioned that "today and every day that passes until the cut is made we Americans are wasting one billion tire miles in unnecessary driving."

His request followed other indications from OPA that the national rationing plan, when placed in effect, would put the rest of the country on an equal footing with the East as to the amount of gasoline allowed motorists.

Easterners receive a basic ration of approximately four gallons weekly, with supplemental allowances for motoring deemed essential. The committee headed by Bernard M. Baruch, which investigated the rubber situation recommended that motorists be curtailed to a general average of 5,000 miles a year.

To further the tire conservation program, President Roosevelt made public today a chart showing that a 30-mile speed would make tires last twice as long as those driven 50 miles an hour. The Baruch committee recommended a speed limit of 35 miles an hour.

The president is expected to announce appointment of a rubber administrator Monday and put into effect then the other steps recommended by the Baruch committee but a formal imposition of gasoline rationing will necessarily be delayed until the machinery can be set up.

"I don't think we have to wait to make a really good start," Henderson declared in a statement. "We can begin to make a big dent in that pile of wasted rubber if we take this matter into our own hands for the time being."

"I am, therefore, asking that every driver in the unrationed areas immediately put himself voluntarily on the same mileage basis as his fellow Americans in the 17 rationed Eastern states."

In those states, seven out of every ten drivers have an "A" sticker pasted on their windshields. That means they are limited to 240 miles of driving a month.

"About 18 per cent have 'B' stickers. These are issued when the essential recreational driving exceeds 150 miles a month."

First Twin-Engine Navigation Planes Reach Air School Here

Big Aircraft Come In By Groups At Intervals During Saturday

The Monroe A. A. F. Navigation school yesterday became home base of the first of a large number of twin-engine navigation training planes, in which advanced navigation instruction will be carried on.

The number of planes which arrived yesterday cannot be revealed, but it was considerable. They came in by groups at intervals during the day. They were flown from Turner Field, Albany, Ga.

With the arrival of the planes, the transfer here of the Advanced Navigation school is well on its way toward completion. Scores of pilots and navigators who will officer the training squadrons have reported during the past few days. Hundreds of advanced navigation cadets, either on the field or on brief furloughs, await the beginning of advanced training here.

All that now remains of the transfer operation is the movement here of cadets now receiving instruction at Turner Field, and additional squadrons of air forces ground troops. Several of the latter organizations arrived here last August 11 by motor convoy.

The first planes to arrive yesterday were two Lockheed Hudsons.

At 8:55 o'clock in the morning, the first of these landed and taxied to a stop on the parking apron.

This plane was piloted by Captain Fite, of Memphis, Tenn. Its navigator was First Lieutenant R. R. Irish, of Grand Rapids, Mich. The crew included Staff Sergeant Thomas R. Fay, of Philadelphia, crew chief, and Staff Sergeant William L. Schmitt, of Kansas City, Mo., and Corporal Daniel J. Federico, of Buffalo, N. Y., radio operators.

Up to 10:30 a. m. soldiers with full machine-gun equipment guarded the postoffice which also houses the telephone exchange, the railway stations and bridges and roads into the city.

Outside the city, from within a Chief of State Petam was absent on a tour of the unoccupied area, soldiers were massed at strategic spots—heavily at the airfield.

There was popular speculation as to whether a serious internal difficulty was expected but authorities explained that it was a practice to test a plan to cope with any possible disorders which might be directed against Petam's government or the town.

MISSISSIPPIAN SLAYER SUSPECT

Robert Bailey Hunted In Rape-Killing Of Two Social Workers

TOMAH, Wis., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Federal, state and military authorities pressed a widespread search tonight for Robert T. Bailey, army deserter and No. 1 suspect in the brutal rape-slaying of two Kenosha, Wis., social workers.

Bailey, 21-year-old native of Hattiesburg, Miss., was charged with first degree murder in state warrants issued by District Attorney Leo J. Goodman, and with violation of the federal law covering interstate transportation of a stolen automobile.

The state warrants charged him with killing Miss Neil John Pietrangeli, 30, and Miss Dorothy Baum, 32, whose nude bullet-pierced bodies were found last Tuesday along a wooded road near Tomah.

The federal bureau of investigation announced that Bailey had been identified as the man who cashed the check of Miss Pietrangeli in a Le Sueur, Minn., bank Tuesday morning.

Meanwhile, an investigation carried on by Coroner Walter J. Ninneman produced information indicating the young woman was shot to death sometime between 9:30 and 10:45 p. m. last Monday.

CONFESSES KILLING 4 MIAMI RESIDENTS

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Vincent Christy confessed tonight that he killed four Miami residents, State Investigator I. R. Mills reported, and asserted he came to Miami for the express purpose of slaying Irving Leopold.

Leopold, his wife, Esther, her son by a former marriage, Stephen, and a motorist, Ralph J. Morin, Jr., were slain July 17 by a two-gun killer.

Mills quoted Christy as declaring in his confession that young Stephen was shot to death by accident when he ran to his step-father, "and since I had killed the others I thought I might as well kill Mrs. Leopold, too."

Morin, whose car was commandeered by the killer, was shot when he refused to give up the vehicle, fought back, wrested a pistol from Christy and slightly wounded him as he fled.

Announcement of the complete confession was made within an hour after Mills, Captain E. W. Melchen of the homicide squad and Detective Sergeant John Deas returned here with Christy from Jacksonville, where he was arrested on a charge of robbery.

The statement by Christy declared that Leopold was shot "to settle an old score" which he refused to detail otherwise because "it would involve too many prominent people throughout the country," said Mills.

Flying Fortresses Of U. S. Get High Praise From Prime Minister

Interpretation By Kirke L. Simpson

(Wide World War Analyst)

Prime Minister Churchill's review ringing with confidence of ultimate United Nations victory and stern warning to Hitler of events in the making, had one other angle of special interest and significance to this writer. It was his reference to the dramatic story of American Flying Fortress planes and their American crews as it is being written in deeds of skill and valor on both sides of the world.

"United States (air force) daylight bombing is a new and increasingly important factor and there is no doubt, both in accuracy of high-level aim and in mutually defensive power," Churchill said, "that new possibilities of air warfare are being opened by our American comrades and their Flying Fortresses."

That statement is a striking tribute to the American air dreadsnaughts, to the crews that fly them and to the technique of their operation. It falls sweetly on the ears of this writer because only recently it was his good fortune to tour Boeing plant number 1 at Seattle where the conception of this huge, high-flying plane with its bomb sight of uncanny accuracy was born and brought to reality.

It would be hard for any American to witness the smooth coordination of workers by the tens of thousands and machines by the hundreds to put better and better Flying Fortresses into the air faster and faster.

This plant's production capacity is already great and could be tripled, Boeing engineers say. Yet it is only one of the huge factories at work on the job, some of them even larger, fantastic as that seems to any one who has visited the Seattle nerve center of the Flying Fortress industry.

Probably no Fortresses of the model I saw turned out have yet reached the front anywhere. They embodied at least a hundred structural changes from the preceding model, most of them dictated by battle experience, yet the plant output did not falter even for a day, as an hour, as one model succeeded the other. Plant records prove that.

The defensive as well as the offensive power of these great ships is stunningly apparent. They bristle with quick-firers of half-inch caliber. They have no blind spot, Japanese attack planes ultimately learned that to their sorrow.

GUNS BRISTLE IN FRENCH CAPITAL

All Government Buildings And Diplomatic Hotels Are Heavily Guarded

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Springing up at dawn and without any warning, soldiers and police manned machine guns at strategic points in Vichy today and heavily guarded all government buildings and diplomatic hotels in mysterious maneuvers which authorities dismissed as mere practice.

Whatever the reason for the bristling of arms all over the city, it was noted that the tanks were pointed at roads leading into Marshal Petam's capital city.

Up to 10:30 a. m. soldiers with full machine-gun equipment guarded the postoffice which also houses the telephone exchange, the railway stations and bridges and roads into the city.

Outside the city, from within a Chief of State Petam was absent on a tour of the unoccupied area, soldiers were massed at strategic spots—heavily at the airfield.

KEMP'S OPPONENT IS OUT OF RACE

HAMMOND, La., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Joseph Arthur Sims, law partner of James H. Morrison, runoff candidate for congress against Representative J. Y. Sanders, Jr., today withdrew from a runoff race with District Attorney Bolivar E. Kemp leaving Kemp unopposed for reelection.

Sims said he was burying his own personal political ambition in order to "assure Jimmy (Morrison) of election to congress from the sixth district."

"I have secured the united support of powerful political factions and organizations in Tangipahoa, Livingston and St. Helena parishes for Jimmy, assuring his election on October 13," Morrison led Sanders in last Tuesday's first primary but failed to get a majority, Kemp leading Sims and also failing to get a majority.

MOSCOW, Sunday, Sept. 13.—(AP)—The Russians have fallen back from one point southwest of Stalingrad before the massed blows of German tanks and motorized troops but elsewhere the Soviet legions are holding their own in bitter-end fighting which has cost the Germans at least 10,000 men killed before the city in the last few days.

Another 5,000 German soldiers have been killed or wounded in sharp fighting on the Volkhov front southeast of Leningrad, where the Germans were reported hurled back.

The Russians revealed the first dent since Friday in their positions before Stalingrad in the following stark phrases in the midnight communiqué: "Southwest of Stalingrad tense fighting took place with enemy tanks and mechanized troops. Soviet forces evacuated one inhabited locality."

HUNT SABOTAGE IN PLANE CRASH

12 Killed And 37 Hurt As Blazing Craft Strikes Building

REIMS, France, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Possibility of sabotage was studied today by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the crash of a blazing, pilotless plane which hurtled through the roof of a Curtiss Wright airplane division building, killing 12 persons and injuring 37.

The F. B. I. is making an inquiry to determine whether or not there was sabotage involved. Special Agent Kenneth M. Piper said there was "plenty of motor left" from the plane, he added, for examination by technicians.

Two plant workers were killed outright in the crash of the wildly spinning craft late yesterday, three others succumbed in the next few hours and seven died today. Five of the injured are in critical condition.

As flags at the plant were ordered lowered to half staff for three days, Lieutenant Colonel Clyde H. Mitchell, United States Army Air Corps representative, said the men "died in the service of their country, just like the men in the armed forces."

Meanwhile Test Pilot J. Bertrand Purnell, 34, who parachuted two miles away from the plant after the plane caught fire, told hospital interviewers he "stayed up there until I couldn't stand the heat any longer."

"I certainly tried—I certainly tried to put out the flames before I jumped," he added. The flames kept coming up and hitting me in the face.

TIRES FABRICATED FROM COTTON SEEN

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Tires fabricated from cotton and cotton products are envisaged by director John Leahy of the Texas cotton research committee.

"Our research to date has not advanced sufficiently to produce a tire for the automobile," Leahy said in a report reviewing the committee's activities in the first year of its operation, "but progress thus far warrants highly optimistic expectations."

"I am confident that before too many tires fall on automobiles now in use, the research activity provided for in the Moffett cotton research act will supply the tractive surface necessary to keep the cars and trucks rolling."

"This material will come from one of the most abundant materials which we have at our command—cotton and its by-products."

Leahy said the committee's research was developing along lines which contemplate continued use of conventional methods of fabricating tires from cotton cord, but in lieu of rubber, the method will entail use of a specially compounded product of the cottonseed in no respect akin to synthetic rubber.

The committee is composed of three Texas college presidents: Dr. T. O. Walton of Texas A. & M. college; Dr. Homer P. Rainey of University of Texas, and Dr. Clifford L. Stone of Texas Technological college.

THE MAYOR GETS A NEW HAT

After issuing a proclamation setting Monday as "Felt Hat Day," Mayor Harvey H. Benoit beat the gun by getting his new felt skyline Saturday. In the above photo his honor is trying to decide between the one he has on his head and the model held by Herbert Fink, left, who fitted the mayor.

MONDAY NAMED 'FELT HAT DAY'

Mayor Proclaims It And Merchants Display Newest in Hats

Monday has been proclaimed "felt hat day" and merchants of the Twin Cities will display the latest models in fall headgear for men.

Mayor Harvey H. Benoit Saturday issued a formal proclamation setting the "day" and calling attention to the fact that the male population should "take cognizance of the event." He stated further that the old straws are faded, are outmoded, anyway, and that every male who expects to remain in style, sartorially, should observe the day fittingly.

Sobriety in contrast to the fanciness of female hats is found in the new fall felts which are being displayed by men's stores.

Hats for ordinary wear are all dark, as the white fur used to produce the lighter colors in men's hats is no longer available. There has been no shortage of felt, however, and there is an adequate supply of natty snap-brims in brown, tan, olive, blue and green.

Business hats have been running from 2 1/2 to 2 3/4 inches in width, slightly narrower than last year. The felt is, however, almost totally devoid of frivolous color in bands or feathers.

Leading the men's chapeaux styles, arm yard navy hats are made of durable gabardine. Another gabardine leader is the sports snap-brim which is expected to replace the old, shapeless felts that most men hang onto for their winter hunting trips.

Hat bands are narrower also in keeping with the brims, but crowns are the same as last year with a tapered effect that allows individual shaping.

Many of the new hats sport a suede finish which is expected to be popular this fall. Quite a few of the new fall models have upturned brims, though the familiar snap-brim is still the style leader.

The Retail Merchants' division of the Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring "Felt Hat Day" in the city Monday in cooperation with the nation-wide move to have the men put away their straws and take out their felts on that day.

BANK OVER TOP IN BOND SALE

Ouachita National Sells Over Million Dollars' War Securities

The Ouachita National Bank has sold more than a million dollars worth of war bonds, establishing a record for Ouachita parish, it is announced by the president, F. F. Millsaps. Over $100,000 of the above amount was sold during the month of August.

During September this far, a total of $23,000 in bond sales have been effected, stated Mr. Millsaps.

The September quota for Ouachita parish has been set at $251,400.

It is realized that to reach or exceed the quota will require team work and the complete cooperation of the people of the entire parish. The nation's fighting men must be backed up with fighting dollars for in no other way shall we be able to win the war.

The management of the Ouachita National Bank expresses appreciation to all who have aided in the past in the sale of war bonds and urges that this cooperative and patriotic spirit be continued in the future months.

DR. RINGO TO ATTEND INTERNATIONAL MEETING

Dr. K. Albert Ringo will attend the 22nd annual convention of the International Hardness and Cosmetics, to be held at Hotel Sherman, Chicago, September 21-24.

This year's convention will be notably important in view of the rapidly changing conditions, and stringent government regulations throughout the industry, it was said.

Leading educators in the field plan to contribute new ideas and suggestions. Dr. Ringo will contribute his new facial and scalp treatment technique, known as Prana Facial and Scalp Treatment, based on the theory of release of ligament tension after release of nerve impingement has been accomplished. This new idea is supported by many leading educators in the field and was perfected by Dr. Ringo, it was said.

DUSTING NEEDED FOR SOY BEANS

Destructive Caterpillar Menaces Crop In Parish, States Borman

The soy bean caterpillar has been discovered in a number of fields in Ouachita parish, according to D. L. Borman, Jr., parish agricultural agent. Dr. C. O. Eddy, entomologist at the L. S. U. experiment station, advocates dusting the crop with 10 pounds to the acre of rosin to control the pest. He states that two dustings may be necessitated. Calcium arsenate should not be used, he states.

The soy bean crop is said to be fruiting heavily and it is said to be important that farmers conserve their returns from the crop not only for their own personal economic gain but also as a war effort in protecting the yield from damage by the destructive caterpillars, Mr. Borman stated.

HOME GUARD KEEPS LATE HOURS HERE

Nightly the silent, deserted residential districts of the Twin Cities are patrolled by two members of auxiliary policemen who ungrudgingly forego a few hours of sleep and donate tires and gasoline to the safety of sleeping citizens.

They neither ask for nor expect fanfare or overwhelming gratitude for their sacrifices for they feel their work is vital. Zell Smith and Fred Hightower, interrupted on one of their rounds, expressed the opinion of the entire organization.

"Most of us are ex-service men," they said, "and are not likely to be called back into service. But we know what war means, and we want to do what we can."

"The question of using our irreplaceable tires and gasoline is unimportant—we don't feel as if we're martyrs or making any great sacrifice. Wins of men who have been called into service know we are looking after them and constantly inspecting their residences and their feeling of security is our reward."

Auxiliary policemen haven't yet run into a great deal of excitement on their patrols, but then, they didn't expect to—hoping to act as the "ounce of prevention" rather than the cure. "But we're armed for trouble," Smith said, flourishing some convincing weapons.

They're spick and span, too, in their knaki uniforms, caps, arm bands and insignia of the auxiliary police. The uniforms are not superfluous, they say, because people who might otherwise be alarmed when a man shines a flashlight about their premises recognize their uniforms and are soothed.

Patrols are made in shifts, with two men assigned to each car. They travel on carefully assigned routes and report to headquarters each half-hour. On their routes they pay extra attention to those homes which have lost their men to the United States service and to business concerns which are particularly vulnerable or have asked for extra vigilance. Loiterers, late strollers—all suspicious characters come in for their share of inspection.

"We always flash our lights on people sitting on park benches, too," Fred Hightower chuckled, "but they never appear to be engaged in subversive activities so we just drive on."

These men who are responsible for keeping the streets of Monroe and West Monroe patrolled seven nights a week work under the direction of Police Chiefs Jeff Caldwell and Frank V. Reitzel and Coordinator John Fox. To the three they report their activities and other than their own part they know little that happens. But they're not curious because they know widespread knowledge of police positions would be dangerous.

'SKY THE LIMIT' FOR AAF CADETS

All Men Who Pass Prescribed Course Will Become Lieutenants

The sky is still the limit for the number of aviation cadets who may be commissioned second lieutenants in the army air forces reserve, Colonel W. W. Welsh, commanding officer of the southeast army air forces training center, announced.

The announcement reassured thousands of cadets throughout the 15-state training command, who may have feared that only a definite percentage of each class would be granted the coveted lieutenantcies, while others of the class were commissioned flight officers, a new rank corresponding to that of a warrant officer with flight pay.

Urging each cadet to do his level best in the all-out air forces effort, Colonel Welsh said: "If there are 100 cadets in a class and all prove themselves capable of being officers, 100 will be commissioned lieutenants—not 50."

Also smashing the prevalent idea that only a definite quota of each class is permitted successfully to complete training courses for bombardiers, navigators, and pilots, Colonel Welsh announced that the only quota imposed by the training center would be a "100 per cent quota."

"Any man who proves that he is capable of passing the prescribed course," he said, "will pass it, and no predetermined quotas or percentages will stand in his way."

Beginning a sweeping drive to obtain the greatest possible number of pilots, bombardiers, and navigators from the material at hand without lowering air forces standards, Colonel Welsh, standing at the head of one-third of the nation's potential airmen, declared that nothing would stand in the way of cadets seeking combat places in the air forces except the limitations of the men themselves.

He said that recommendations for limitation of students would be based solely on the records of the student's proficiency in ground school and flying training, and that academic boards would in no case resort to elimination of a student as a disciplinary measure.

All breaches of discipline, he said, would be handled under the 1941 article of war, or through court-martial proceedings.

Colonel Welsh, scored unnecessary pining of lower classes by upper classes, and announced that in these critical times, all actions tending to humiliate lower classmen, would not be tolerated. Training conducted by the upper class must be conducted with dignity, efficiency and with a new forward looking the military education of the lower classmen, he said.

U. S. PAYMENTS ON CROPS GIVEN

Simple A Program To Embody Important Changes This Fall

Quachita parish farmers who expect a 500,000-acre crop of winter legume drive are being notified of important changes in the payments that can be earned under the agricultural conservation program of the AAA by planting winter legumes. "In the past we have had a soil-building practice payment for planting winter legumes and another for turning under or leaving on the land a good growth of winter legumes," Chairman W. F. Ross of the parish simple A committee pointed out. "In the 1943 program both practices will be combined into one practice and a payment of three dollars will be made."

Another change listed by the committee chairman provides for a partial payment of $1.50 to farmers whose legume crops are a failure, provided they have followed certain approved practices. These practices include mowing of legume seed, planting before November 30, planting at the approved rate per acre, and application of phosphate, lime or potash where there is deficiency of these materials.

It is particularly important, he said, to apply phosphate in areas where there is a known deficiency of this material. These areas include Allen, Bienville, Calcasieu, De Cade, Claiborne, East Feliciana, Evangeline, Jackson, LaSalle, Lincoln, Livingston, Sabine, St. Helena, St. Tammany, Tangipahoa, Union, Vernon, Washington, Webster, West Feliciana, and Winn parishes. Also included are upland areas of the following parishes: Bossier, Caddo, Caldwell, Catahoula, East Baton Rouge, Grant, Natchitoches, Ouachita, Rapine, and Red River.

Farmers who do not follow the approved methods of planting will not be qualified for partial payment in case their legume crop is a failure, he said. There is an ample supply of 20 per cent superphosphate which may be secured through the AAA.

R. REENTS NAMED TO L. S. U. STAFF

BATON ROUGE, Sept. 12.—(Special)—Appointment of Dr. Arthur H. Reents as instructor in Latin and Greek in the department of classical languages at the Louisiana State university has been announced by President C. B. Hodges. Greek will be offered as a major subject at the university effective with the opening of a session on September 18, the announcement further states.

Dr. Reents comes to L. S. U. from the University of Nebraska, where he was assistant professor of Latin and German. He had previously taught at the University of Nebraska Central college in Nebraska, and several Nebraska high schools.

The bayonet is said to have been invented at Bayonne, France, in the 17th century.

BROTHERS GET TRANSFERS

Cadet Bernard F. Berry, of Monroe (left above) has recently been transferred from the naval air station at Pensacola to the naval air station at Miami to complete training and receive his commission in the next few weeks. He enlisted January last and took basic training at New Orleans. He was one of the first students trained at the local A. A. A., 1940 class. His brother, Sergeant Burton D. Berry (right above) was recently transferred from the 90th fighter squadron, Newark, N. J., to the 320th fighter squadron, Bradley Field, Windsor Locks, Conn. He enlisted in September, 1941, receiving his technical training at Keesler Field, Miss. In February he was transferred to Selfridge Field, Mich., in June to Newark airport, then to Bradley Field where he is now located.

NURSE'S AIDE CLASS FORMED THIS WEEK

Formation of a new nurses' aide class has been announced by Mrs. Travis Oliver, chairman of that division of the Red Cross. Application for membership in the class will be received at Red Cross headquarters between 10 a.m. and noon any day this week, she said.

The first nurses' aide class consisted of 25 members, most of whom have graduated and are now giving their services at the St. Francis Sanitarium or Charity Hospital.

NATIONAL DOG WEEK PLANNED

Will Be Observed Sept. 20-26; Canines Are Of Added Value Now

National Dog Week will be observed in the United States September 20-26. In many cities there will be parades and dog shows held. Plans for the local observance are not as yet complete but will be announced later, stated H. H. Baur, local committee chairman.

This year, in the midst of war, special importance attaches to dogs. There are already 600 dogs in the war services with a grand total called by the government of 125,000.

The purpose of Dog Week is to secure better care for dogs directly and indirectly. This calls for better dog owners, more sympathetic understanding of a dog, keeping dogs in control and off the streets; making dogs obedient, useful servants, whether as watchdogs, protectors of the family, herding cattle and sheep, helping the blind, rescuing drowning people or detecting saboteurs in industrial plants and government warehouses.

There is a big job for the dog to do, it is pointed out, and Dog Week should be given unusual emphasis this year, Mr. Baur states.

Back To Spinning Wheel

There is no reason to expect a boom in the second-hand spinning wheel market as a result of the melancholy prediction by Dr. Hans Elias of Middlesex college that great poverty will prevail after this war. Most people are not likely to take the forecast too seriously. But at least no one need be expected to come along soon with a more desolate view of the post-war world.

The Massachusetts educator said there will be no cars, no radios, no washing machines or refrigerators in the world that will exist after the war. Doctor Elias says that the women will have to return to their great-grandma's spinning wheels and that men will have to build their own cottages.

Does this mean that great-grandma's spinning wheel will still be here long after autos and refrigerators are gone? And how can men, who will not be able to build a crystal set or a washing machine, be gifted sufficiently to build cottages?

It is possible that Doctor Elias' predictions will bring cheer to the hearts of those romantic souls who are forever wishing for a return of the people to the land and the handicrafts. These people pay no heed to the fact that the huge population of this nation must be fed and clothed and that to make it possible, improved vast-scale farming and vast manufacturing industries are necessary. Those who appreciate the fact that American industrial civilization, under private enterprise, has lifted an enormous burden of arduous work from the back of mankind probably will not relish Doctor Elias' predictions.

Of course, Doctor Elias may be entirely wrong. No man can peer into the future and speak with certainty of what is to come. It is quite as valid, if one is gazing into time, to predict a rosy post-war world. There are 320 official and unofficial organizations now looking into the post-war era, and it would be a sad commentary on their ability if they could conjure nothing more than a return to hand-spinning and a boom in the sandlot subdivision and cottage building businesses.

Doctor Elias seems to dismiss the fact that the war is increasing tremendously the productivity of the American industrial machine and that it is training in technical skills millions of men and women. When this machinery and talent are devoted to production of civilian goods, the rate of output will be stepped up stupendously. And if there is a return to free enterprise there will be plenty of work because of the backlog in the demand for products no longer being made because of priorities.

EATING LIKE A HORSE

An overwhelming pride in the scientific inventions and discoveries of this age would be cut down to its proper, modest size, if once in a while they were compared with what the ancients had to offer along similar lines.

For instance, only the other day a University of Pittsburgh scientist announced the development of a process for obtaining vitamin C from alfalfa.

The principal ingredients in the recipe are alfalfa and ether. The dried alfalfa is treated with the ether and the oil residue is distilled in a vacuum. The portion of the oil which boils at a lower temperature than that of vitamins A, D, E and K is collected. The scientist-discoverer gives his word that this mixture, taken internally, results in the synthesis of vitamin C in the body.

This vitamin oil is not only a medicine designed to ward off scurvy from humans but, if fed to cows, increases the concentration of vitamin C in their milk. What did the ancients have to offer comparable to this?

The awesome picture of a man in rags crawling about the hanging gardens of Babylon and ravenously breakfasting on grass comes back hauntingly down the arches of the years.

The alfalfa, depicted by the artist, was Nabuchodonosor, king of the Babylonians. At first glance, it would appear that his royal highness was a bit tetchy. But in view of the researches of the University of Pittsburgh professor, wouldn't it be more just to give him the benefit of a reasonable function of acquiring a few vitamins in a charmingly informal manner? Maybe he was just making sure to get his vegetables fresh right out of the garden.

In fact, the ancient monarch was going the professor one better by taking his alfalfa straight while the man of twentieth century science had to go through all the trouble of "cracking" it to get the same result.

Commentators of old say that King Neb was troubled with a mysterious ailment, generally thought to be lycanthropy. A dip into the dictionary supplies the definition, "a mania in which the person afflicted imagines himself to be a wolf."

It appears there is nothing new in this respect, either, although nowadays the incidence of this once rare disease is much greater as a scientific survey of a DeSard street crowd any night will show.

Christmas toys will be scarce and higher in price this year. Uncle Sam is concentrating on the real article.

JIMMIE FIDLER BELIEVE IT OR NOT In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 12.—The Arthur Lakes will add a little Dagwood (or Blondie) in March. Is the socialite family of Lieutenant Charles Munn plotting annulment of his recent marriage to Louise Stanley, ex-wife of Dennis O'Keefe and Addison Randall? John Carroll will get army deferment for a single role in Republic's "Hit Parade."

Paramount's Louise LaPlante and NY business man Lester Friedman are secretly married. In the play, "Watch on the Rhine," interest centered on the male lead; in the picture, Bette Davis gets the most lines. Mary Brian is shopping for a dance tour partner.

George Raft is bidding for a ground officer's commission in the ferry command-at his age, he'd have to rate a majority! Jane Withers will auction her famous doll collection and donate proceeds to navy relief. Medicoes have ordered Betty Hutton to the mountains for a long rest before she resumes acting.

Standby for wedding news when Bonita Granville meets Jackie Cooper in Cleveland on the 25th; they'll visit family friends, then tour army camps. Rate Peter Arno 1-A for optimism—he's here in search of three actors with no service obligations to play roles in a Broadway play!

Pals think (I don't) Bruce Cabot will altar-trek with Marie McDonald on his return from NY; he may join the Marines. Donna Reed, visiting home-folks at Dennison, Ia., sold $100,000 worth of war bonds at voluntary appearances.

Laugh of the Week: Arthur Murray tells it. Seems two chorines were swapping chatter on a film set. "Can you imagine," said one, "I was walking down the street last night when a man stepped out of a doorway and grabbed me?" "Who was it?" asked the second girl. "He's a complete stranger to me," answered the dancing cutie, "except I know his initials are R. M." The second chorine, puzzled, asked: "How do you know that?" "Look," snapped the first, "it says so—right here on his watch!"

Preview Nights: Pic of the Week: U.S.A.—"The Moon and Sixpence" (George Sanders-Herbert Marshall-Doris Dudley). The Somerset Maugham best-seller gets a screening that retains all its Maughamish. Recommended: Universal's "Give Out, Sisters." The Andrews Sisters in mile-a-minute comedy that will get second-billing with theaters and first-billing with fans. U.S.A.'s "One of Our Aircraft Is Missing," British-made war drama as grimly inspirational as a Churchill speech. Universal's "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror" (Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce). Fiction's super-sleuth makes a jest of the Gestapo. So-So: Columbia's "Vengeance of the West" (Bill Elliott-Text Ritter). Little Nell gets saved with a maximum of gun play. Disappointing: Universal's "Half-way to Shanghai" (Kent Taylor-Irene Hervey). Half-way won't be far enough for most audiences.

Confidential Communiques: Twentieth Century-Fox: Now that Uncle Sam has borrowed Henry Fonda, Tyrone Power and Victor Mature, how about giving some worthwhile roles to Lloyd Nolan? He's ready! Warners: If you were put out by George Montgomery's ungracious remarks after your squabble, have a laugh—twenty-four hours after you changed your phone number, he got the new listing from a mutual friend. Clark Gable and Henry Fonda: I wish you could read the many letters that are flooding my office, praising the unpretentious way in which you're doing your country. I wish that all Hollywood males who are still holding out for commissions could read them, too.

Odd-Formation: Barbara Stanwyck has yet to complete a movie role without suffering at least one painful injury. Inevitable sleepwalker Bob Hope sleeps with one big toe tied securely to a bed post. He's Addams! Loose superstitions: Jack Carson's belief that it's good luck to stick stamps on upside down. Odd-hobbyist Sheila Ryan makes pin-money by writing greeting card verses. Madeleine Carroll, today, is one of Hollywood's wealthiest stars—but she lived on a straight diet of shredded wheat for two weeks while bidding for her first acting break.

Dense plant managers have banned bond-selling visits by Hollywood beauties—too many man-hours are lost while employees get autographs. At Paramount, last week, 30 Filipinos, drawing plus pay for an embarrassing assignment, were playing Japanese soldiers in "Night Plane From Chungking." This week, Paramount is fantastically hunting for replacements. Six of the 30 have been drafted and are now wearing American uniforms. (Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

OUR CHILDREN

WRONG ATTITUDE IN WAR
A young woman, intelligent, self-supporting, a responsible citizen, called on a friend, a friendly call of neighborly inquiry regarding a such member of the family. There was an emergency, no need for the use of the car. She was within a block of a carline, within two blocks of a train service, but she used the car.

Her friend, thinking she had come by the train, invited her to have lunch. "No, no, thank you. You see I have the car and I don't want to park it too long or I'll get a ticket." "You're driving your car? Were you going somewhere else? Anything wrong?" asked her host.

"No, nothing wrong. I just used my car. Why shouldn't I? Everybody else uses his."

That attitude is a strange one for an intelligent citizen to take. It is based on a false idea, an idea conjured up for the defense of wrongdoing. The lady said that "everybody was not doing it," but really only a few selfish ones like herself. And if other people were doing what her conscience plainly said was wrong, why follow them? What others do is not to influence us if we believe their action wrong.

The worst of that situation, and it is no common one, is its effect on the children. "What's the use? Everybody else is using rubber, gas and cars, why should I do without? There's oceans of sugar in the warehouses. This rationing of it is stupid, just a gesture of the politicians. When Father or Mother says such things the children accept that attitude and think and behave accordingly. That attitude has far-reaching effects. In the schools we have air-raid drills. Any thoughtful person understands the imperative need for such drills. We found a few boys and girls who seemed to be taking the idea. "My mother says it's silly, and it's likely to cover little children. She says there is no possibility of an air raid, and if there was, what good would a drill do if there was one?"

Nobody knows about what is going to happen, but school people know that children trained to obey a signal and follow a set routine in emergency drills are safer in time of emergency than they ever could be were they untrained and unprepared. Parents must depend upon teachers for the protection of the children in the schools, yet this apparently intelligent parent has reduced the value of that protection to zero in her child's mind.

What we think is what the children act upon, not what we say. If we think rationing is a device of the politicians to annoy other politicians; if we believe conservation of materials and equipment is a trick of the manufacturers; if we believe that our leader would rather scare us than appeal to our reasoning minds, then the children will believe in that attitude and they will not save their ration tickets, they will not obey their leaders. They will waste; they will go their own reckless way and get themselves and their friends and neighbors into difficulties.

Sunday School Lesson

Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 20
Text: Genesis 41:18-34
By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
Editor of Advance

In this lesson we reach one of the highlights in the story of Joseph. Joseph, unknown to his brethren, inquired of them whether there were others in the family, and found that there was a younger brother, Benjamin, who had not come down to Egypt with them in their quest of food. He then told them that if they wished further food they must bring Benjamin with them the next time. They sought in every way to avoid this, referring to the loss of Joseph himself and saying that the further loss of Benjamin would break their father's heart. Joseph, however, was insistent, and the famine was so keen that in spite of Jacob's unwillingness to let Benjamin go there was no other way.

Then came the incident which has to do with the climax of the story. When the brothers had secured their grain and were starting for home Joseph had a silver cup hidden in Benjamin's sack. When the brothers had gone a little way on their journey they were overtaken and the cup was found there where Joseph had planted it. It was, of course, a very serious situation. And now we come to our lesson. Judah, who originally had suggested selling Joseph to the Midianites, now starting him on his journey to Egypt, now came to the front. Assuring Joseph that the loss of Benjamin would kill his father, he urged that he should be taken as a substitute and punished for the alleged theft and that Benjamin should be allowed to go home.

The incident quickens many reflections, the most important of which is upon the latent capacity for goodness and nobility that is in human nature, exemplified quite often in men whose lives have been by no means free from serious fault but who rise to heights of courage and sacrifice in a crisis. Judah's life was far from blameless, as one may see by reading Genesis 38, almost all of which gives details that are not much to his credit.

This latent capacity for good and great things is a hopeful fact concerning humanity. If it were not true, we might well be discouraged. We are finding it exemplified today in the crisis of American life when men, whose lives, like that of Judah, have not always been altogether commendable, are showing themselves capable of great decisions and of nobility of character and nobility of character. It is regrettable that so often it requires some great crisis, like famine or catastrophe or a nation's peril, to bring out this latent and triumphant goodness. Perhaps the greatest task for the Christian Church is so to influence men in times of prosperity and peace that all that is best in them may find expression without the need of some extreme situation to reveal it.

If we could see in times of peace the readiness of most men to serve and sacrifice for their country we should see democracy a power in action free from the evils and injustices that have too greatly marred all of us so fine even in our own good land. In the next lesson we shall come to the climax of the story as the innocence of Benjamin is established and Joseph reveals himself to his brethren, at the same time giving them full forgiveness for the wrong that they had done him.

Marshal Erwin Rommel's current setbacks in Egypt are partially explainable by remarks made by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., just after he returned from active duty on the Libyan front.
Lodge, a reserve major who had volunteered for a look-see at Libya, came back to the German standard, the Rommel legend is apt to fade accordingly.
"That fellow on the wall," Lodge says, pointing to a picture of General George (Old-Blood-and-Guts) Patton, "is good enough to knock Rommel's ears down, and there are a couple more mechanized experts in the American army who can do the same thing."

The boys will use their money to pay college expenses. Clarence being a L. S. U. senior. He has enlisted in the army air corps reserve. The other four boys will attend Northeast Junior College.
This is the fourth consecutive summer that Clarence Martin has been awarded free trips when he had completed his summer's work as salesman. His brothers also won trips last year.
A banquet was recorded the boys in Dallas, Tex., which is the headquarters of the sales office. The Martin crew was shown to have shattered the all-time record for sales weekly.

JEWISH NEW YEAR OBSERVED HERE

Jewish New Year was observed here by families of that faith with services in Temple B'Nai Israel and at the USO rooms, Friday night and Saturday morning.
Leonard Gewirtz, brilliant young student in the Hebrew Training college, Chicago, brought a message of inspirational nature at the USO clubhouse Saturday morning. His theme was "The Jew Looks At Himself." Rabbi F. K. Hirsch lectured to an unusually large assemblage at the temple Friday at 8 p.m. on the theme "In All Thy Ways." Saturday morning he spoke on "The Synagogue's Role."

pneumonia is subsiding, after eleven days of high temperatures and much anxiety. We cannot hope to thank individually all those who sent cards, letters, telegrams and telephone calls, but our hearts are full of gratitude to them, and Pat, when she is stronger, will enjoy going over the pile of communications. So many suggested sulfadiazine, believing them to be miracle workers. The patient was a sulfas from the beginning, but, odd enough, they seemed ineffective. Many correspondents on the Pacific coast wrote me of their surprise in seeing New York rail trains operating on surface lines that run to defend plants. Yes, as fast as they go off of service on our disappearing lines the old wooden cars are sent for emergency duty to warplant areas mostly in the West. Meeting Mr. Tom Buzzi, Shell Oil executive, in a hot dining room the other day I remarked that he had the same name as a man who once was county attorney in my home town. "He was my grandfather," said my new friend. "So as Mrs. Roosevelt has wisely remarked, it's a small world after all."

I've been reading "See Here, Private Hargrove," about to Daughter Pat, help her pass pleasantly some of the long hours of illness.
It is not only very amusing stuff but it is good medicine for what we have learned to call civilian morale. It tells the home folk, in an entertaining manner, that the boys are enjoying life, even though they do miss their homes and kinfolk.
If I were the boss of the army, I'd shift Hargrove around from camp to camp and from training to training three months or so at each job, ask him to write one of two books of this size and general nature of your own.
He couldn't raise above a non-com job and continue to do the same kind of stuff. But at the victory, he could be given a colonelcy or something like that, to reward him for good and useful service.

This doesn't seem to be a propitious time for starting new eating-and-drinking houses in Manhattan.
Equipment is expensive and hard to come by, unless you patronize one of the gigantic second-hand or tear-down houses of the lower Bronx. Help is not easy to get and hold.
The public, too, seems apathetic toward new restaurants.

One that opened recently in W. 44th street has been almost devoid of customers when I have visited it.

This despite the fact that the restaurant is in a fine old building, with a bar right at the door. Here a chef makes sandwiches from great piles of punky ham and corned beef, sells 20-cent steaks. You would think such provender, at such price, would bring in the crowds, but doesn't. The prospect is not bright for someone who put about $4,000 in this venture.

Riker's Island, under construction for more than a century, is still unfinished.
It is an island in the center of a bulge in the East River, approximately opposite 185th street, Manhattan, has been a city dump since 1854, it was an unofficial dump for generations prior to that date.

When the city took title, there were 87 acres in Riker's Island. Now there are 46 acres, built upon tin can broken glass, and garbage.
The United States government will not permit the island to be further expanded, lest it obstruct navigation in the river.

Prior to ten years ago, Riker's Island was known as the home of the rat, and of the biggest and fiercest rats in the world.
A cloud of smoke perpetually hovered over the island. Somehow the rats were caught and kept, and continued to burn. No man dared approach the island for fear of the rats. Now the island is landscaped city nursery, supplying trees for city streets, and a prison, are there.

COLONEL POND LONG IN ARMY

New Commandant Saw Extensive Service In Former World War

Colonel Frederick L. Pond, commandant at Northeast Junior college, R. O. T. C., has been assigned here, coming immediately from Camp Livingston.

His present army assignment is in connection with many years spent in the U. S. army and in the national guard of his native state of Pennsylvania. He saw service on the Mexican border when hostilities threatened there a few years ago, and also he participated in some of the most important engagements in World War No. 1, which included Compiegne-Marne, Aisne-Marne, Oise-Aisne and in the Meuse Argonne.

After a distinguished career in the earlier war, he returned home and served for some years as principal of the Meadville (Pa.) High school following completion of studies at Pennsylvania State college, from which he holds the degree of doctor of education.

The Pond family is remaining at Meadville, but later his wife and boys will doubtless remove to Monroe. He states that the outlook for the R. O. T. C. unit here is excellent and he expects 200 to 300 men from the college enrolled. Equipment and uniforms have been requisitioned and will arrive shortly, he said. The drill will be supplemented with study of military nature and the purpose will be to fit men for useful service in the army after preliminary military training. Leadership naturally will be emphasized and recognized, and the men will be made better citizens in time of peace through this military training, Colonel Pond assured.

The colonel is assisted by Sergeant Miller of the U. S. Army who has been in Monroe some days.

MAYOR'S KIN FIRST VOLUNTEER

First volunteer for the "Louisiana Legion Battalion" of the United States marine corps, from the L. B. Faulk Post No. 13 here, Hilton Gilliland, is shown being congratulated by his uncle, Mayor Harvey H. Benoit, District Commander Ed Apperson, and Post Commander D. Curtis Seamon.

MARINE LEGION BEING SOUGHT

Governor Jones In Proclamation Lends Impetus To Project

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 12.—(Special)—With United States marines carrying the war right into the laps of the Nipponese, the American Legion posts of the state of Louisiana, have begun a drive to procure volunteers for the armed forces of the United States, with their initial goal a Louisiana legion of United States marines consisting of one thousand men for the month of September, it was announced today at the legion state headquarters.

Legion posts from all over Louisiana have been telegraphing marine corps recruiting headquarters in New Orleans, announcing their complete accordance with the general plan to secure volunteers for the Louisiana legion of marines.

Governor Sam H. Jones has issued the following proclamation: "WHEREAS, this country is confronted with the greatest danger that it has ever faced in that we have been attacked by enemies who would destroy every particle of our American way of life which we as Americans cherish; and

"WHEREAS, the heroic men of the United States marine corps have rendered valiant service and are today giving no quarter to the enemy wherever they may find him; and

"WHEREAS, the state of Louisiana has sons in the United States marine corps who are playing their part in avenging the treacherous attacks upon the peace loving people of this nation; and

"WHEREAS, because of our democratic system, a man is still free to volunteer his services in any branch of the armed forces of the United States; and

"WHEREAS, with the fight against the Nazis going on throughout the four corners of the earth, the need for volunteers in the United States marine corps is tremendous; and

"WHEREAS, it will take every ounce of everybody's cooperation for us to emerge victorious; and

WANT APPLICATIONS OF MARINE SEAMEN

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Special efforts to secure the applications of every former merchant marine seaman and officer living in Louisiana are being made by all United States employment offices, it was announced today by Henry Le Blanc, director of the United States employment service for Louisiana.

"Thousands of men who formerly went to sea are undoubtedly living in Louisiana," Le Blanc said. "There is no better way for them to serve their country now than to help man the 2,000 new ships of the victory fleet which will be built by the end of 1943."

"Every man who has had experience at sea as a sailor, cook, radio operator, engineer or officer will be needed if supplies are to reach our forces overseas when they are required."

The drive to secure applications of men with sea experience will be continued by the employment offices until September 18.

Sergeant Willie F. Kelly is the truckmaster of the motor transportation pool at the Monroe AAF navigation school. This job requires a good constitution and unflinching disposition, both of which Sergeant Kelly fortunately has.

These requirements are merely a minimum, as can be easily seen when the setup is explained. The motor transportation pool, which is under Captain Thomas Dunphy, operates all the government vehicles on the field. These vehicles may belong to various

The other day a pert young lady appeared on the field in uniform. Officers and men, not to mention cadets, blinked and looked twice—no handpicking in this instance—to be sure they had seen aright.

The girl in uniform was Miss Jean Dickson, of Americus, Ga.

The uniform she was wearing was not that of a nurse, but the navy blue suit adopted by feminine civilian employees at Turner field, Albany, Ga.

It should be remarked at this point that the war department and army air forces headquarters have approved a plan for uniforms for all female civilian employees of the army air forces, to be bought and worn at their discretion. A committee is at work selecting the official AAF uniform for women from designs submitted by outstanding fashion designers. It is not expected, however, that this program will interfere with uniforms women employees are already wearing, adopted after approval by local commanding officers.

Miss Dickson is the first of a score of girls to be transferred here along with the advanced navigation school. Her job at Turner field was in the personnel section of post headquarters. She is a stenographer.

This column found Miss Dickson a vivacious young woman, notable for her red hair, bright brown eyes and a few freckles. A native of Homer, La., her present home is Americus, Ga., where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lumpkin, now live. She was graduated from Americus high school in 1940.

Her uniform is of gabardine, in air corps blue. It consists of a skirt, coat and a jaunty overseas cap. The girls usually get two skirts, according to Miss Dickson. The blouse is optional. The coat is adorned with gold buttons, and each lapel is decorated with the air forces wing and propeller insignia, as is also the cap. "It really saves your clothes," Miss Dickson confided, "and you don't have to worry about what to wear."

Lewis M. Shelton, the assistant area engineer of the Monroe AAF navigation school project, has behind him a long experience as a highway engineer, CCC camp superintendent and construction and area engineer at Barksdale field, Louisiana.

Mr. Shelton entered the Louisiana State Highway department early in his career. By way of preparation, he held at B. E. degree in civil engineering from Tulane University.

where he was graduated in 1925. After a year with the state highway department, he was with the parish highway department of Caddo parish for five and a half years. There he gained valuable engineering experience in working at close hand with the problem of maintaining automotive transportation arteries running into the important center of Shreveport.

For another five years Mr. Shelton was superintendent of a CCC camp at Chatham, La.

Then for three years, at Barksdale field, Louisiana, Mr. Shelton gathered experience in the kind of work he is now doing. At Barksdale field, he was first a construction engineer, then assistant area engineer, and finally area engineer.

As assistant area engineer at Barksdale, Mr. Shelton worked with Captain Otis P. Johnson, Jr., as area engineer. When Captain Johnson left Barksdale to come to Monroe as area engineer, Mr. Shelton succeeded to his place as area engineer. Later, last June 6, Mr. Shelton followed Captain Johnson to the Monroe project, and the old team was again together.

Mr. Shelton was born January 20,

MARINES ATTACK ON GUADALCANAL

Six Japanese were killed in the encounter. There were no marine casualties.

According to plan, an intensive artillery barrage was laid down on the Japanese camp to soften things up for the attackers. Shortly the barrage lifted and Company "X" moved from its overnight bivouac to the Jap right flank.

This force was pinned down immediately by heavy machine gun fire and sniping from the enemy line.

(Note to General R. L. Denig: I was with this bunch, boss, and it was plenty hot. I took cover behind a log that seemed no bigger than a tooth pick, with bullets smacking into the other side and kicking up dust a foot to my right.)

Greatest difficulty was in picking out the enemy firing points, so expert was their camouflage.

Meanwhile Company "Z" had begun closing in from its bivouac several hundred yards up in the hills. They soon encountered resistance, and from then on were almost constantly in action. They fought their way through Japanese outposts, and Captain Spurlock calmly organized his company front and established a firing line against the main Japanese position.

Enemy forces were well dug in. They had trenches and machine gun nests and many snipers in the trees. Here again their uncanny ability at concealment was demonstrated. Lieutenant John E. Flaherty of Wilmington, Del., reports that while leading a platoon he was fired upon at least 30 times during the day by snipers without actually seeing one.

One of our lieutenants and his runner, a private, were active in reconnaissance work, going well out ahead to scout enemy positions. While they were moving in the open, our observers saw the private shot and killed by a sniper. The lieutenant bent over the private to give aid and was also hit.

Marine gunner Edward S. Rust of Detroit said he saw the lieutenant, although mortally wounded, fire on the sniper with his pistol. The Jap was found dead a few feet away with two slugs in his body.

The Japanese automatic weapons were described as being of three sizes. One was a light gun, presumably .25 caliber, the second size was approximately that of our .30 caliber, while the third was a heavy gun, reportedly about 60 caliber.

Three machine gun nests held up the advance for a short time. Gunner Rust performed what seemed an almost impossible feat by using a rifle grenade to knock out one nest from a distance far beyond the usual grenade range.

The other two nests were knocked out by marines charging under the protective fire of rifles. One of the riflemen, Private Nicholas Sileo of Brooklyn, N. Y., stayed at his post and kept blazing away until eight Japs were chased out of the nest he was covering.

Shortly after the main resistance was broken, the enemy tried to effect a counterattack. Captain Spurlock anticipated the action by establishing a firing line in favorable terrain. About a hundred Japs charged the line, brandishing bayonets and yelling at the top of their lungs. They were mowed down by fire of rifles and automatic weapons. Private Frederick Norcross of Danbury, Conn., and Private Lawrence Gerkin of Washington, D. C., were especially commended by their superiors for coolness and bravery under fire.

A volunteer accompanying one of our companies was Sergeant C. C. Arndt of Okolona, Miss. Sergeant Arndt was one of three survivors of the patrol which was sent on a night mission to the Matanikou camp several days ago. Arndt killed two Japanese that night. Tuesday night he killed two more and on Wednesday he accounted for six by sniping.

William P. Liddle, pharmacist's mate, third class, of Winding Gulf, W. Va., carried the navy insignia to glory in the encounter. Liddle went everywhere unmindful of enemy fire, caring for the wounded.

Captain Spurlock reports that four of his men were killed and 11 wounded. At least 60 of the enemy were killed and some prisoners taken.

Of the other companies taking part, company "Y," in boats, started the trek up the shore line before dawn, the boats reached their rendezvous without incident and the company disembarked and went into patrol formation, whereupon the boats put out for Kukum.

The boats were under machine gun fire from the beach. Colonel Whaling in the lead boat saw a Jap run down the shore in front of the enemy camp, wildly waving a Rising Sun flag. Colonel Whaling, no mean rifle shot, picked up his sniping piece, peered down the sights and pulled the trigger. The Rising Sun went down for the count and so did the flag waver.

Company "Y" cleared out the few Japanese posts they encountered. They reported they killed four or five and suffered no losses of their own.

Shortly after dark, at dusk in the afternoon, observers saw the flames rise high into the sky that meant "operation successful."

The enemy camps were cleaned out and the remnants of Japanese resistance in this area were scattered.

Observers said it apparently was one purpose of the maneuvers to show how that sentence might be completed.

The only news on the Madagascar fighting from the French here was a laconic communique saying that "on the evening of the 11th, our troops were resisting enemy pressure on Betsiboka, inflicting very heavy losses on the British."

Chief of Government Laval saw S. Pinkney Tuck, United States chargé d'affaires, today, presumably to hand him his promised protest to Washington against the attack on Madagascar.

Laval also consulted Krug von Nidda, German consul-general, Vice-Admiral Auphan, naval secretary and commander of the French naval forces; former Colonial Minister Platon and former Governor Giacobbi, of French Guinea.

Pertain spoke to workers in the railroad city of Amberier, in the Ain department, telling them that R. A. F. strafings of trains in the occupied zone were "massacres." The old marshal said his "heart rises up" at the thought of such actions.

Stations on Gizo island of the New Georgia group. They sank a small enemy surface craft and did considerable damage to buildings.

The action was reported in navy department communique No. 123 as follows:

"South Pacific: (All dates given are east longitude).
1. The Japanese are continuing their determined efforts to dislodge American forces from the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area of the Solomon Islands.
2. Enemy air raids against our positions in this area continue. On September 9, 26 enemy bombers escorted by Zero fighters attacked our installations at Guadalcanal. United States aircraft shot down five bombers and four fighters. On September 10, 21 enemy bombers attacked Guadalcanal and four of the Japanese planes were shot down. On September 11, 26 enemy bombers with fighter escort again attacked the Guadalcanal installations. Six bombers and one fighter were shot down by United States planes.
3. Enemy destroyers have shelled our positions at night but no damage has resulted.
4. On September 11 our Douglas 'Dauntless' dive bombers attacked enemy installation on Gizo island in the New Georgia group. A small enemy surface craft was sunk and considerable damage was done to buildings and installations.

"5. United States marines assisted by dive bombers and fighters continued to seek out and engage enemy troop units in the interior of Guadalcanal. The enemy has reinforced and supplied the units by means of small craft which approach the shore under cover of darkness. Despite opposition to these landings, it has not been possible to prevent them entirely."

British commentaries had expected the Vichy defenders to put up some resistance but official advisers here told only of small efforts so far.

The native Malagasy population was reported maintaining a neutral attitude, and even the Vichy government has taken a resigned view that completion of the British occupation, which began with the seizure of the northern naval base of Diego Suarez in the initial operation last May, is but a matter of time.

The new operation began only two days ago with naval, aerial and landing exploits concentrated on three or more points on the accessible west coast of the island of East Africa across the Mozambique channel. Simultaneously with the seaward approach, the British long established at Diego Suarez, renewed their overall drive southward with the aim of joining forces with the newly landed imperials.

A communique today from General Sir William Platt of the British East African command reported "considerable progress" inland and told of negligible opposition which included some machinegun fire with no casualties resulting.

Voluntary gas rationing asked.

Plant officials said the pilot, a veteran of more than 3,500 hours in the air, was making a "routine test of the plane when he was forced to jump at high altitude due to a fire in the plane from unknown cause."

The ship crashed into the concrete floor of the building after its wild, flaming flight, and skidded nearly 60 feet, disintegrating and scattering parts over a 30-foot radius.

One worker, who declined use of his name, said:

"There'll be some great stories of heroism on the part of the workers when the whole picture unfolds. Many of the men wrapped blankets around their heads and darted in through the flames and smoke to carry the injured to safety. Some of these rescuers were burned themselves."

SOLDIER DROWNED

HEADQUARTERS THIRD ARMY.

Somewhere in Louisiana, Sept. 12—(P)—The death of Elmer F. Durman of Morgantown, Indiana, who was drowned September 10, while on maneuvers, was announced today. His body was recovered late yesterday. A soldier of one of the Third army engineer regiments, Durman listed as his nearest relative, Miss Etta I. Durman, Church street, Morgantown.

But the average of 'B' car driving in the rationed area is substantially below that maximum.

"Every driver, I am sure, can comply with this request, and by living up to it conscientiously can make one of the most important contributions he will be privileged to make toward winning this war."

Earlier OPA officials who declined to be quoted by name, had indicated a possibility that the national gasoline rationing plan might undergo some modifications in view of the fact that it is designed to conserve rubber rather than gasoline, as is the case in the Eastern states.

Thus, there was a possibility, although OPA emphasized that no decisions have been reached, that the four-gallon coupon value now in effect in the East might be changed. These sources emphasized that, regardless, the coupon values would be uniform throughout the country.

They added that contentions that Westerners did more automobile driving because of longer distances to cover had been shown to be erroneous, and that OPA figures indicated that, on the average, the most driving per car was done in New England.

KILLED BY STUMP

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 12.—(P)—A. C. Guiteau, 37, worker from French settlement on a defense plant construction job, was killed today when a stump pulled into the air by a tractor he was operating struck him in the back. His neck was fractured.

BAILEY EMPLOYED AS TYPEWRITER REPAIRMAN

HATTIESBURG, Miss., Sept. 12.—(P)—Robert Taylor Bailey, object of nationwide hunt by the federal bureau of investigation for questioning at St. Paul in connection with the sex slaying of two Wisconsin social welfare workers near Tomah, Wis., early this week, was employed as a typewriter repairman by the quartermaster corps at Camp Shelby near here.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bailey of Hattiesburg, whom he had been expected to be expected a furlough and would be home soon.

A local welfare workers records showed that Bailey had served three terms in the Mississippi Industrial school at Columbia, August 26, 1933, which began with the seizure of the school to July 25, 1935, and March 7, 1937, to July 7, 1940. He escaped from the school several times but on each occasion was returned to serve the remainder of the term. He also dropped out of local schools after several long absences.

Harry T. O'Connell, special agent in charge of the Milwaukee FBI office, said Bailey, deserted from Fort Bragg, N. C., September 1 after stealing an army revolver. Fourteen months earlier he had deserted from Fort Benning, Ga.

The FBI reported that Bailey appeared at the Le Sueur bank about mid-morning last Tuesday and presented a $25 check to J. T. Peterson. It was drawn on Miss Petrangeli's account in a Sparta, Wis., bank and signed with her name and Bailey's.

Bailey, in uniform, blandly declared Miss Petrangeli was his sweetheart and had authorized his use of the account. He said he had her car outside and offered to exhibit it. Moreover, he brazenly produced his army serial number to vouch for his identity.

The FBI later showed a picture of Bailey to Peterson who readily identified it as that of the check passer.

FIRST OF NAVIGATORS' FLYING CLASSROOMS

The first navigation training planes were flown here yesterday from Turner Field, Albany, Ga. They arrived in groups at intervals during the day, beginning just before 9 a. m. This view shows some of the twin-engine AT-7s lined up on the parking apron of the Monroe flying field. The AT-7 is notable for the blister in the top of the fuselage. The blister permits the navigation cadet to take sights on celestial bodies while in flight. Every cadet will spend 100 hours in one of these ships, working actual navigation problems, before he is graduated.

tenant John R. Haley, of Greenville, Miss., navigator; Staff Sergeant James L. Cooper, of Memphis, crew chief; Corporal Walter N. Taylor of Ridgefield, S. C., radio operator, and Staff Sergeant Louis L. Morrison, of Calais, Me., passenger.

Of the planes which arrived later in the day, most were AT-7s, also twin-engine aircraft.

In operation, the AT-7 carries a complement of five—pilot, instructor, and three navigation cadets. The cadets sit at three desks arranged one behind the other in the fuselage of the ship, and work independently on problems prescribed by the course of instruction. At their disposal are the four methods of navigation—pilots' dead reckoning, radio and celestial navigation. The instructor is on hand to check and discuss the work of his students on the spot.

The necessity for night missions results in a round-the-clock schedule of flying activities.

MISSISSIPPIAN SLAYER SUSPECT

fare workers near Tomah, Wis., early this week.

Clinton Stein, agent of the FBI for this area, said Robert Taylor Bailey, 21, of Hattiesburg, Miss., had been identified by a photograph as the soldier who cashed a check last Tuesday after forging the name of one of the two victims, Miss Nell Petrangeli, 30, slain with her was Miss Dorothy Baun, 32. Both of their nude bodies were found in the woods early Tuesday.

Stein said Bailey, who had served three terms in the Mississippi Industrial school at Columbia between 1933 and 1940, stole a .38-caliber army revolver No. 3641, when he deserted September 1, last, from Fort Bragg, N. C. After an arrest in Kansas City on July 10, 1941, for trespassing, Bailey was returned to the army, where he served six months in the guard house.

A warrant charging Bailey with transporting a stolen automobile across state lines was sworn out at Madison, Wis., by United States Commissioner James J. McManamy.

Bailey formerly was employed as a typewriter repairman by the quartermaster corps at Camp Shelby, Miss. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bailey.

Stein said Bailey is five feet, 11 inches tall, weighs 141 pounds, and has brown hair, brown eyes, ruddy complexion and is a plumber by trade. Records at Hattiesburg showed that Bailey escaped from the state industrial school several times but was returned each time to complete his term. He also left city schools after long absences.

GETS 1ST COTTON CROP INSURANCE

Franklin Parish Man Receives Initial Payment In Entire State

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 12.—(Special)—Officials of the United States department of agriculture announced today that Edward Jones, 28-year-old Franklin parish farmer, was the first Louisianian to receive a cotton crop insurance indemnity payment.

Jones, whose farm lies along Big creek near the Baskin community in Franklin parish, had insured his 1942 cotton crop for 75 per cent of the average annual yield of his farm, the maximum insurance obtainable. He filed a claim for a total loss after his six-acre cotton crop was destroyed by a flood in the latter part of May.

G. J. Durbin, state triple A administrator, and Farrell M. Roberts, cotton crop insurance supervisor for Louisiana, said that several other claims for total losses arising from similar disasters in various sections of the state will be paid in the near future.

Partial losses will be paid after the end of the cotton picking season, when the extent of such losses can be determined.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation paid Jones' indemnity claim by transferring to his ownership 850 pounds of lint cotton, an amount equal to 75 per cent of his average annual yield plus a 19 per cent allowance for cottonseed. Indemnity payments are made in lint cotton because crop insurance covers yield, but not price. Jones can sell his 850 pounds of cotton whenever he wishes.

Cotton crop insurance was offered for the first time this year. Just prior to cotton planting time, cotton growers were offered an opportunity to insure their 1942 crop for 50 per cent or seventy-five per cent, whichever they wished, of the average annual yield of their farms. The size of the premium, which could be paid in cotton or cash or deducted from an indemnity, if any, depended on the crop-loss record of the farm. Jones' premium was 20.1 pounds per acre.

Crop insurance for the 1943 crop will be available early next year just prior to planting time. The exact dates will be announced later.

LOUIS MEEK IS NAMED TO POST

Former Police Sergeant Appointed State Probation Officer

Louis Meek, former sergeant of the Monroe Police department, has been appointed state probation and parole officer with offices in the Ouchita National Bank building here.

Announcement of Meek's appointment was made Saturday in Baton Rouge by W. S. Terry, Jr., state commissioner of public welfare. Mr. Terry said that the new parole and probation officer for this district would serve in the division of parole of the state department of public welfare.

In addition to supervising and investigating parolees and parole matters in this area, Mr. Meek will also have supervisory powers over adults on probation. This is the first time in the history of Louisiana, the welfare official explained, that adult prisoners will have been released on probation by the district courts. Authority for release on probation was provided under authority of Act 49 of the regular session of 1942.

Mr. Meek's territory includes the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and 28th judicial districts. At the present time, he has 90 parolees under his supervision.

MILLS RETURNS TO WASHINGTON

Congressman Hopes To Return In Few Days To Resume Campaign

Congressman Newt V. Mills, who topped four opponents in his campaign for reelection in the first primary last Tuesday, left for Washington last night where he expects to remain for several days.

Congressman Mills polled more than 13,000 votes but lacked a majority by a wide margin and will enter the runoff with C. E. McKenzie, Monroe insurance man who finished second to Mills.

"It is necessary for me to return to congress," Mr. Mills said. "However, Mrs. Mills has remained at home and she will be happy to help with any problem pertaining to my candidacy for reelection to congress."

"If business permits, I hope to return in a few days."

A number of important bills are pending in congress, Mr. Mills said, and in answer to a request by party leaders he has temporarily abandoned his campaign personally and returned to Washington. However, he said Mrs. Mills and his friends in each parish of the district would "carry on" for him.

"Consideration of the nation's welfare comes before my campaign," Mills said, "and I am returning to congress to lend my efforts toward prosecution of the war and enactment of legislation which is necessary at this time."

MRS. WARLICK IS HIT BY MOTORCYCLE

Mrs. Anderson Warlick, 608 Broad street, was treated at Wright-Bendell clinic late yesterday afternoon for injuries received when she was hit by a motorcycle on DeSiard street in front of the Joy theater. The motorcycle was operated by William W. Thompson, 21, of 412 Wood street, according to a police report.

Attending physicians said Mrs. Warlick's condition was not serious. She suffered shock and minor bruises.

Police Captain J. D. Busby who investigated the accident said Thompson was riding west on DeSiard and Mrs. Warlick was walking across the street from the north side of DeSiard toward the theater when the accident occurred. In his report to police Thompson said Mrs. Warlick stepped from between two automobiles into the path of his machine and in stopping the rear of the motorcycle skidded around and knocked Mrs. Warlick down.

Two of the most frequently asked questions about ships in the United States navy are the cost of a shell and the weight of the large guns. A single shell for a 16-inch gun costs about $900 and the powder about $300. A 16-inch gun weighs about 125 tons; a 14-inch gun weighs about 90 tons.

POOL HERE WILL CLOSE SEASON

Today Will Be Final One For Summer; Has Proved Highly Successful

The Swayze natatorium will close for the summer tonight, it is announced by C. R. Tidwell, commissioner of streets and parks.

For the fifth season, the municipal pool has provided the city with a major recreational attraction and the splendid record for safety and cleanliness has been maintained. Mr. Tidwell assures, throughout this time.

The past summer, men of the armed forces have greatly enjoyed the pool which they have pronounced among the very best in the entire nation. They have been lavish with their compliments to the city of Monroe for having such an important and well maintained recreational project.

The closing of the pool this year will come a few days earlier than is the usual custom. Mr. Tidwell states that one of the most important reasons lies in the fact that inability to obtain needed chemicals which keep the pool in first-class condition, has caused the necessity of a slightly earlier closing.

He thanks the public for their cooperation which has made the past season one that has been highly successful to all concerned.

MISSISSIPPI RACE BECOMES HOTTER

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 12.—(P)—With the recent heavily on personalities, Mississippi's senatorial runoff campaign charted steadily rising political temperatures as it neared its climax tonight.

In last-stretch speeches, Senator Wall Doney declared that James O. Eastland was unleashing the full force of "high-priced propaganda and dozens of paid campaign workers," while Eastland told voters to be on their guard against "last minute underhanded deals, typical of (Senator Theodore G.) Bilbo, being pulled in an effort to stem the rising tide."

Both candidates predicted success. Eastland spoke tonight at Pontotoc, while Doney had Newton and Brandon on his itinerary.

Eastland asserted that Bilbo should have been in the senate working against the bill which he said gave negro soldiers suffrage by way of absentee ballots.

Doney challenged Eastland's record of preparedness, asserting "he had a chance to do something about preparedness while he was serving that 90 days in the senate, but he doesn't even mention his record on preparedness, does he?"

Eastland declared that Doney "doesn't claim to have accomplished anything in the senate."

The tight-packed second primary campaign which ends with the balloting Tuesday developed largely into a contest between supporters of Governor Paul Johnson and Senator Bilbo.

ASSIGNMENTS OF PRIESTS LISTED

Naming Of New Assistant Chancellor Announced By Archbishop

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 12.—(P)—Appointments and transfers of priests in various parishes of the archdiocese and the naming of an assistant chancellor were announced by Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel.

The Rev. Charles J. Plaque, J. C. L., who recently completed a post-graduate course at the Catholic University of America, has been appointed assistant chancellor, being the first to hold that office since the last years of the administration of the late Archbishop John W. Shaw.

The vacancy at St. Mary's church, at New Roads, caused by the death of the late Rev. John Hoes, will be filled by the appointment of the Rev. John A. Janssen as pastor. Father Janssen was pastor at St. Brigid's church at Schriever for the past two decades.

Other appointments and transfers include:

The Rev. Louis B. Balcetich, rector of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Violet, rector of the Church of St. Anne, Napoleonville.

PENN ASKS COLORED PEOPLE TO REMAIN

The Rev. Irvine Garland Penn, pastor of the Martin Temple Colored Methodist Episcopal church, director of the colored welfare work of the Twin City Community Chest said Saturday: "I am opposed to any group or representative of any organization coming into Monroe and this parish herding colored people and 'shipping' them to remote points of the nation, telling them large salaries and better jobs await their coming. Nothing is said to them about the cost of maintenance and the conditions under which they are to live, thus when they arrive they find life almost unbearable. My people are being fooled away from the farms and out of domestic service, the time has come for us to do our best to stop such action."

"The war is not going to last always. What if it should stop soon, where would our people who have left good jobs in this section find themselves? My plea to my people is to remain where you are, with the job you have. If your wages are not what they should be, discuss the matter with your present employer. Colored young men under the selective service need not leave Monroe and Ouachita parish for fear of being mistreated. As an associate member of the board and having met in most of the meetings, may I say that there is a finer lot of men on any selective board than in Ouachita parish and every colored boy that has appeared before that board has received justice."

COLORED KINDERGARTEN TO OPEN NEXT TUESDAY

The Martin Temple Community kindergarten that has served the community of Monroe for the past three years will open its fourth term next Tuesday. Already over 50 children have been registered between the ages of two and six years.

The public clinic will be used to assist in meeting some of the medical needs of the colored people. Reading rooms and recreational grounds are being put into shape for the opening. All colored parents who desire to place their children in the day kindergarten are requested to come on Monday and Tuesday to register.

Board Advises Removal Of Building Restraints

Would Prepare For Extensive Home Construction After War

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(P)—The national resources planning board recommended today the immediate removal of "restraints within the homebuilding industry" by changing federal anti-trust and racketeering laws and strengthening their enforcement in preparation for an extensive homebuilding program after the war.

In a study of the home construction outlook after the war, the board said that the nation could use 900,000 to 1,200,000 new houses each year for a decade following the conflict. The bulk of the new homes, the board advised, should be within the means of the lower-middle income group and available to "the farms, the small towns, and the independent, non-metropolitan cities as well as the metropolitan areas."

This board demand would make possible the development of a vast industry through factory production of panels and other units needed in home construction, the board said. Moreover, the homebuilding industry would need "drastic reorganization and reorientation of its market viewpoint."

The board was created in 1939 to recommend long-range plans to the president and congress for fullest use of the country's resources. Its chairman is Frederic A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt.

"In an effort to protect themselves against the uncertainties of the market and the weakness of management," the board said, "subcontractors in the separate trades frequently enter into agreements to maintain prices and control the distribution of work. Suppliers of material do the same thing. Often subcontractors and suppliers, and sometimes the materials manufacturers as well, all join in protective combinations. Labor, following a similar course where it can, establishes its own restraints and, to solidify its position, often joins with the subcontractors' combination acting through strikes and boycotts, as the enforcing agent."

"The removal of industrial restraints is an obvious first step toward industrial expansion."

Estimating that 7,000,000 of the 37,000,000 dwellings of the nation would be "ripe for replacement if we had a better means for providing attractive, low-priced houses," the study said "at least 1,000,000 additional new houses could be used and formation of new families would further add to this need. At least 2,000,000 replacements are needed on farms alone."

The board cited $3,400 as a "reasonably attainable average cost for a non-farmhouse" in a postwar program.

Coincidentally, the federal housing administration made public figures showing the number of new houses under construction by private builders operating under the FHA program during the first eight months of this year was 105,987, or 49,536 less than in the same period last year. The decline was attributed to the impact of material shortages and elimination during recent months of all construction not essential to the war effort.

The resources board, in addition to proposing removal of restraints on the homebuilding industry, mentioned the following "possibilities for immediate action" in furthering the building program:

Preparation by the federal government of model building codes and providing to localities facilities for consultation and testing.

"Review of existing methods of corporate taxation with a view of providing, if possible, incentives to capital investment and expansion in new enterprises such as housebuilding."

"Support of the housing market as may be needed by the continued purchase by local housing authorities, under a coordinated federal program, of dwellings for the low-income groups."

"Continuance of existing aids to mortgage investment supplemented with measures designed to encourage equity investment by financial institutions in rental housing."

FIREMEN ARE STILL SEARCHING FOR BODY

Monroe firemen late last night were still dragging the Ouachita river in the vicinity of LaZarre's Point for the body of a 14-year-old negro boy, Lowell Brown, son of Alice Hopkins, 3001 Jackson street, who was drowned about 4:45 p.m. Friday.

The boy was said to have jumped out of a boat in mid-stream with the intention of swimming the rest of the way to shore. Witnesses said he "didn't swim a lick," but immediately began floundering. The negro boy went to Nelson Payne's boat dock at the foot of Forest avenue Friday afternoon and asked a white girl there to paddle him halfway across the river and he would swim the rest of the way. The girl extended her paddle to the boy when she saw his distress, but he did not grasp it. It was stated.

Miss Helena Hayward And Lieutenant Frank Morgan Married At Grace Church

Lovely Ceremony Unites Prominent Couple Here

Bride's Father Officiates; Reception At Home Follows Marriage At Church

The sincere and affectionate interest of countless friends was centered in the marriage, September 9, of Miss Helena Hayward, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Farren Hayward, and Lieutenant Frank Morgan, son of Mrs. Alma Morgan and the late Wilson Frank Morgan, of Brentwood, Tennessee.

The ceremony, characterized by lovely simplicity, took place at five-thirty o'clock in the afternoon at Grace church with the bride's father, rector of Grace church, officiating.

A brilliant pre-nuptial concert was rendered by the organist, E. L. Jefferson, while the guests were being seated.

The altar was adorned with tall sprays of white gladioli and pink and white roses. Tall white standards overflowing with gladioli formed a semi-circle for the wedding party comprising the bride's sister, Miss Ann Hayward, who served as maid of honor, and the bridegroom's only brother, William Morgan who served as best man.

Miss Hayward wore a light wool model of beige with Kelly green felt hat and all accessories of the same color. A shoulder corsage of talisman roses was worn.

The bride wore an attractive afternoon model of dark green crepe with rhinestone buttons. Her accessories, including a smart little hat, purse, shoes and gloves, were of brown. She carried an ivory prayer book from which she read the opening prayer and a Stephanotis. For something old she wore an heirloom bracelet.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on College avenue. The reception suite was in beautiful floral attire with rose colored dahlias placed in artistic arrangement on mantles and tables.

The mothers of the bride and bridegroom extended courtesies. Mrs. Hayward was wearing an azure blue model with corsage of Briercliff roses and Mrs. Morgan wore a black chiffon afternoon model with corsage of white carnations.

The cutting of the wedding cake took place in the dining room where the bride's table was developed in pink and silver. Beautiful pink roses encircled the wedding cake and formed oval plaques at the four corners.

Iced fruit frappe was served from an immense crystal bowl imbedded in pink dahlias.

The bride changed her wedding ensemble for a smart tulle of seal brown with brown accessories.

The young couple are spending their honeymoon in Nashville, Tenn. Lieutenant Morgan is awaiting government orders.

The bride, a young woman of sterling qualities, is a great favorite in this city where the Hayward family is identified with the social, civic and religious life of the community.

Out of town guests attending the wedding included the bride's sister, Mrs. Bernard Webb of San Antonio, Mrs. Alma Morgan and William Morgan of Brentwood, Tenn.

Methodist Women Plan

Annual Birthday Party

Members of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the First Methodist Church of Monroe have received attractive invitations to the second MRS. WILLIAM SLAUGHTER... Mrs. William Slaughter, who before her marriage to Captain Slaughter, of Meridian, Miss., was Miss Jane Ludlow.

En Passant

Miss Mays McKnight, a charming young woman with an adventurous turn of mind, left this morning for San Francisco where she will board a commercial vessel for Honolulu, Hawaii. Miss McKnight, who held a secretarial position with the Brown Paper mill, has accepted a position with the R. C. A. Communications, Inc., in Honolulu and is enjoying an anticipatory thrill over the new life awaiting her in this glamorous island in the Pacific.

Before her departure Miss McKnight was extended many bon voyage courtesies.

The departure of Miss Barrier Mae Walsworth, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Walsworth, last week for Dayton, Va., where she will teach psychology and education at Shenandoah college, takes from our midst another charming young woman who has been a prominent figure in social circles since her graduation from Vanderbilt university where she obtained her B. A. degree. She obtained her M. A. degree and worked toward her Ph. D. degree at Peabody college.

Miss Walsworth will be especially missed in the Spinner club as she was a charter member and has taken a prominent part in the social activities.

Miss Joye Fourmy of Memphis, Tenn., formerly of this city where she made her home with her uncle, L. Underwood Fourmy, and Mrs. Fourmy, was the fourth generation of brides to wear the wedding gown originally worn by her great-grandmother sixty-five years ago. In the Commercial Appeal last Monday pictures of brides, four in number, were shown in the social section. The fourth generation, Miss Fourmy, was pictured in the same wedding dress of shining satin. It was designed by a modiste in Louisville, then a fashion center, sixty-five years ago when Lula Green became the bride of Alphonso Jarvis. The tiny blouse is covered with the ribbon ruffles, stitched in the middle and to the basque in an intricate and interesting manner.

Rare old heirloom lace in ruffles, topped by bands and bows of the ribbon, extends down the front panel, which is caught in at the waistline and widens out toward the circular hemline. A triple row of the ribbon ruffles borders the panel and encircles the wide bouffant skirt in two scalloped-like designs, one below the knees and the other at the hemline.

Narrow godets are pleated at the waistline in the back, adding fullness later to the skirt that falls in deep, voluminous folds and sweeps out into the great circular hemline.

Old-fashioned mittens of the heirloom lace matching the ruffles of the wedding gown were made for Miss Fourmy, who was given in marriage by her father.

Her veil was fraught with bridal tradition, too, having first been worn by her aunt, Charlotte Jamieson of Portland, Ore., when she became the bride of Dr. William A. Ellis, Jr. Of bridal illusion applied with imported Belgium lace in a deep border down each side and sweeping out beyond her gown in an unusually effective pointed design, the veil floats cloud-like from a tiny coronet of the illusion embroidered with ivory seed pearls in a diamond-shaped design.

For her only ornament she wore a Maltese cross, brought to this country from France more than 150 years ago and an heirloom in the family of the bride's father.

She carried a bridal bouquet of miniature roses, orchids and Stephanotis, with puffs of the heirloom lace matching her gown caught among the blossoms, and with deep ivory satin streamers.

The period beauty of the bridesmaids' dresses and the nuptial setting of palest-tinted blossoms and ivory-toned tapers were in complete harmony with the exquisite wedding gown, so steeped in family tradition.

An immense American flag was unfurled at the Walter Kellogg home when Walter Kellogg, Jr., reached the interesting age of three years and was presented with the Stars and Stripes by his grandmother, Mrs. Gladys Sperry, and his uncle, Ensign Burt Sperry, who is stationed with the naval air forces in Seattle, Wash. Of all the gifts this youngster received on his birthday anniversary the flag seemed the one he loved the best. It captured his imagination and claimed his undivided attention when it was raised from a long flag staff in the rear garden. The youngster has already learned that when the national anthem is played, men, women and children are expected to stand silent at attention, heels together, arms hanging straight down. If a flag is displayed, they are to face the flag. He has also learned that flags are taken down at sunset.

The name of a well-known former Monroe resident, Mrs. Emma Michie of Lake Charles, appeared recently in the Washington Merry-Go-Round. The article, following, will be read with keen interest by the many friends of Mrs. Michie in this city, where she is always a welcome visitor:

"Lake Charles, La., on the edge of the pitch-pine country where the strenuous Third army combat maneuvers are taking place, is one of the loveliest communities in the romantic state, Louisiana. And among the most charming and gracious civic leaders of Lake Charles is Mrs. Emma Michie.

"Vivacious Mrs. Michie 'adopted' the entire corps of cadets of the nearby pilot training school. The old, spacious, cool Majestic Hotel, which she owns, is their town 'home.' There the cadets come in their leisure hours to enjoy Mrs. Michie's mouth-watering southern cuisine and there they bring their parents and sweethearts who come on visits.

"Mrs. Michie's food is renowned far and wide in Louisiana. Visitors even come from New Orleans, famed for its restaurants, to partake of Mrs. Michie's specialties. One of these is a soul-soothing hot weather drink, which Mrs. Michie calls 'coffee velvet,' but which her innumerable army of friends call 'coffee Michie.'

"So that other friends and hostesses of men in the service can enjoy the delights of 'coffee velvet,' Mrs. Michie has communicated to the Washington Merry-Go-Round the recipe for her exquisite drink. Here it is: "One cup good hot coffee; two generous scoops vanilla ice cream. Whip together thoroughly. This is important. Pour into tall glass half filled with ice, let stand for a few minutes and then drink.

"P. S.—'Coffee velvet,' Mrs. Michie warns, cannot be made on a quantity scale. To be really good, each helping must be made separately."

birthday party to be given Tuesday, September 15, at 3 p.m. at the church.

Mrs. Zell Smith is general chairman of the party. Mrs. Ben Rush is chairman of the invitation committee and her assistants are Mrs. Earl Hitt, Mrs. Grayson Guthrie, Mrs. B. B. Handy, Mrs. F. L. Jones, Mrs. Neal McHenry, and Mrs. Alice Goins.

Mrs. John Sholars will render an organ prelude to an interesting program. Miss Polly Cole will be the guest soloist. Mrs. J. B. Pollard, of Alexandria, La., who is the Louisiana state conference president, will address the guests.

The invitation committee extends a welcome to all Methodist women and friends to the party.

Miss Martha Jane Hill Marries Captain Hugh Glasgow In Military Wedding

Brilliant Ceremony Is Held At Grace Church

Couple Walks Beneath Arch Of Sabers Formed By Groomsmen; Reception Follows

All the romantic and sentimental traditions associated with wartime military weddings since time immemorial were observed in the impressive ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Martha Jane Hill, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Bridger Thornhill of this city, and Captain Hugh Gordon Glasgow, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Glasgow of Fairfield, Ala., Saturday, September 12, at picturesque Grace Episcopal church at 8:30 o'clock.

The candlelit church was fragrant with the perfume of tube roses, reminiscent of old southern gardens. Spears of white gladioli and clusters of superb white asters were also used in the decorative theme. They overflowed from tall white urns against a background of woodwardia ferns and adorned the altar where cathedral candles gleamed in brass candlesticks.

Wide, white satin ribbons marked the aisle down which the wedding party moved to the strains of Lohengrin's processional and Mendelssohn's recessional.

While the fashionable throng of guests were being seated, the organist, Leon Hammond, rendered a nuptial concert. MacDowell's "To A Wild Rose" and Grieg's "Liebestraum" were impressively rendered during the ceremony. The soloist, Miss Elizabeth DeWeese, sang in beautiful voice, Cadman's "At Dawning" and "I Love You Dear" by Grieg.

The bride's attendants, Miss Mary Louise Fudickar, maid of honor, and Miss Ann Carter Johnson, Miss Jean Jackson, Miss Margaret McHenry and Miss L. LeFlore, maids, were charmingly dressed in white silk jersey fashioned with long, light fitting bodices, full skirts, bracelet length sleeves, and coronets of maize tulle cascading to the waistline in the back. They all carried arm bouquets of Tallman roses tied with long lengths of maize tulle ribbons.

The flower girl, Lella Doyle Stevens, wore a gown of maize tulle fashioned along lines similar to the gowns worn by the maids.

The best man, Captain O. B. McEwan, and the groomsmen, Captain I. B. Krentzman, Lieutenant R. J. Hartnett, Lieutenant O. S. Frost and Lieutenant Jacques E. Van Gieson, wore the full dress uniforms of the United States army.

The bride walked to the altar with her father, Lieutenant Colonel Thornhill, who was also in full dress army uniform. She wore the traditional white duchess satin, an Emily model, fashioned with deep yoke of marquisette embroidered in seed pearls and long, light fitting sleeves ending in calli lips points over the hands. The skirt gathered to the bodice at the hip line, fell in long graceful folds ending in a long court train.

Her veil of illusion was caught to the hair with a coronet encircled with fresh orange blossoms. A wedding bouquet of orchids, bride's roses and stephanotis was carried for something old she wore the handsome antique diamond bracelet belonging to her paternal grandmother. A knot of blue was worn under her wedding gown and an English shilling was tucked away in her slipper. The bridegroom's gift, a string of pearls, added the last note of distinction.

Following the ceremony, performed by Dr. Edward F. Hayward, rector of Grace church, the bride and bridegroom walked beneath an arch of flashing sabers formed by the groomsmen, all of whom are officers in the United States army.

A brilliant reception followed at the Thornhill home on St. John drive. Considerable beauty of detail was noted in the decorative theme. White blossoms, gladioli and roses were used exclusively in the entrance hall, reception suite, dining room and solarium.

The mantel in the reception suite, banked with white roses and gladioli and flanked with tall white taper in antique grondele candlesticks, formed a decorative background for the wedding party.

Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Thornhill and Mr. and Mrs. Glasgow stood in the entrance hall to welcome the guests. Mrs. Thornhill wore a distinctive evening model of poudre blue with blue Alencon lace blouse and corsage of Rubrum lilies. Mrs. Glasgow wore a French blue crepe evening model with corsage of Butterfly roses.

Frosted trappes was served in the solarium from an immense crystal bowl embedded in bride's roses. Individual wedding cakes and assorted confections were served from a lace covered, flower adorned table, placed at one end of the solarium. The silver ladle used for serving the punch is an heirloom in the bride's family. It is more than one hundred years old and belonged to the bride's great grandmother.

During the receiving hours a program of charming nuptial numbers were rendered by a group of talented Monroe musicians. Mrs. Olive Leigh Cochran, Miss Dorothy Clavert, Miss Cochran Slagle, Miss Lee Slagle and Miss Kay Kugler.

The cutting of the wedding cake was a charming ceremony. The cake, a luscious confection, adorned the bride's table in the dining room. The table, overlaid with handsome imported cloth of Renaissance lace, was encircled with white bride's roses and valley lilies. The bride cut the cake with her father's saber and stood with the bridegroom under an arch of sabers while the best man, Captain McEwan, offered a toast to the future happiness of the young couple in traditional army manner.

The bride changed her wedding raiment for a smart Eisenberg model of brown sheer with short coat and all accessories of brown. A corsage of yellow orchids completed the distinctive ensemble.

Captain and Mrs. Glasgow departed for a honeymoon on the gulf coast and will later be at home in Alexandria where Captain Glasgow is stationed at Camp Livingston.

The bride, an accomplished young woman of exceptional charm, created a special niche for herself in social circles of this city where she is great favorite. She is a graduate of the Converse high school, Stephens college, Columbia, Mo., and the Louisiana State university. She is a member of the Kappa Delta sorority, the Junior Charity League and the Spinster club.

Captain Glasgow is a graduate of the Alabama Polytechnic institute, Auburn, Ala., and a member of Phi Kappa Alpha fraternity. He is now stationed at Camp Livingston, Alexandria, La.

Out of town guests attending the wedding were Mrs. H. S. Stevens and daughter, Lella Doyle Stevens, of Brookville, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Glasgow of Fairfield, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gordon of Marion, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Senti and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Story of Shreveport; Captain and Mrs. O. B. McEwan, Captain J. B. Welcome Branch Book Club In First Meeting

Talks By Everett Burgoyne And Mrs. E. E. Lawson Feature Interesting Program

The Welcome Branch Book club held its first meeting of the year Wednesday afternoon at the Y. W. C. A. with Mrs. T. H. Scott, Mrs. J. T. Eubanks, Mrs. F. H. Peterson and Mrs. L. V. Tarver, hostesses.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. L. V. Tarver. The club song "Louisiana" was sung in unison and the club collect repeated.

Mrs. J. R. Wright revealed that Mrs. Paul T. Wright was one of the six winners in Louisiana in the state and nation-wide contest on "Publicity." Such recognition is an honor for the club as well as for Mrs. Wright.

After a short business session the meeting was turned over to the program chairman, Mrs. T. H. Scott.

Patriotic music was rendered by Mrs. Norman Conn, who sang, "You Can Defend America," accompanied by Mrs. E. E. Lawson at the piano. Club members and guests joined in singing of the national anthem.

Mrs. E. E. Lawson gave a most interesting paper on "Patriotic Music in Connection with the War" and said in part:

"Music has from time immemorial, played a very important role during war time. The first practical use of music was made by military men to lighten the step of marching soldiers. Martial tunes are very necessary for the successful execution of military maneuvers, because the soothing tones of a melody will ease the greatest tension of mind and body, and infuse new strength and courage to carry on the soldier marching into battle with a song in his heart, is an irresistible fighting machine. Even the primitive savages realized this truth, because they marched to war to the beat of tom-toms.

"Soldiers must have music and civilians must have music too. During the present conflict it is making life just a bit more bearable for not only fighting soldiers but civilians as well. In that memorable onslaught on London, music was employed to great advantage. Nine professional singers and a pianist were organized to run the nightly gauntlet of bombs and shrapnel, going from one air raid to another, in London and suburbs, trying to banish 'air raid blues' by singing songs and leading community singing. Results were extremely gratifying in that psychic tension was eased, and time passed much more quickly underground, while waiting for the end of air raids.

"So, while the soldier is fighting for the American home and way of life, let us 'March Forward With Music,' William Allen White, long the sage of the common people of America, whose wisdom and foresight two years ago pointed out the conditions which, if we, as a nation, had observed, might have spared us the disaster of Pearl Harbor, wrote: 'The nation that can sing and make a joyful noise before the Lord has the spirit of victory in its heart.'

Mrs. T. H. Scott introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Everett Burgoyne. He said:

"Change in our times is portrayed by Sears catalog, as used by producers on Broadway to find out how America dressed in 1910. 20th Century-Fox used this system in Jesse James. Catalog of '90s had celluloid collars, Prince Alberts, mourning handkerchiefs and mustache cups for the elegant gentlemen. Buggies occupied eleven pages in 1886—none in 1933—probably will be back in 1943.

"We have made great strides in chemistry and science. What greater strides are in store for us in the next twenty-five years? In the short space of two or three years, we have seen fluorescent lighting develop—Nylon thread made from coal, air and water—with strands as strong as steel and fine as a spider web.

"Amazing changes have taken place in standard of living in the past twenty-five years. Radio, auto and telephone for every family. Instead of two or three stores in every town we have shops up to date as Chicago and New York. A style is not splashed on Fifth Avenue a week before it is in every small town in America. Same for fruits and vegetables found fresh and plentiful in every village. We are better fed, clothed and housed than

E. Loyd, F. H. Peterson, George Phibus, J. F. Prendergast, G. B. Riggin, H. R. Saenger, T. H. Scott, Dean Sellig, Zell Smith, Charles Swain, L. V. Tarver, Curt Thies, J. R. White and Paul T. Wright. Guests were Madames Stanley Archibald, Frank Higleyman, Herbert Menge, C. R. Sanders and Miss Bess Sharp.

Joye Fourmy Marries Alva Hansel Thomson

Friends in this city will read with more than passing interest the account, appearing in the Commercial Appeal, of the wedding of Miss Joye Fourmy, of Memphis, Tenn., formerly of this city. It follows:

"Candlelight gleaming through greenery and pink gladioli provided a fairylike setting for the wedding of Miss Joye Fourmy to Alva Hansel Thomson Saturday night at Evergreen Presbyterian church. Wearing an heirloom wedding gown of ivory ribbon and lace with a slight hoop effect, the bride looked like Dresden doll, her face framed by a tiara of lace and pearls. She carried an exquisite wedding bouquet of Sweetheart roses interspersed with puffs of illusion and real lace and centered by a deep purple orchid.

"The altar of Evergreen Church presented a nuptial picture, with the deep ivory tapers, glowing in single cathedral standards and branched candelabra and etched against a background of greenery. Graceful garlands of Southern similar marked the chancel and the choir rail above woodwardia fern and palms. Gladioli in the faintest bluish pink, asters of palest lavender, and frosty silver king were arranged in tall floor baskets about the altar and in bouquets along the bridal aisle.

"A faint rustle of silk taffeta accompanied the bridesmaids in their quaint styled frocks of a deep ash of roses shade, reminiscent of an old-fashioned pink from a colonial garden. The models were fashioned along lines of the long torso bodice, brought to the day from a style of long ago, and feature deep sweetheart necklines from which a row of dainty self-covered buttons extends to the waist. Bracelet-length sleeves were shirred full and then caught tight below the elbow and the skirts were in the wide bouffant mode.

"Their bouquets, typically colonial, of tiny asters in rose pink and pale orchid hues were encircled with a ruff of net and lace and tied with pale orchid streamers. Three bows of ribbon in harmonizing shades were caught in their pompadours. They wore tiny gold cross necklaces.

"Mr. Thomson had as his best man, Jim Quinn, and groomsmen were W. M. DeLoach, Bryce Keston, Clinton Nickles and Frank Fourmy, Jr., brother of the bride.

"Miss Opjuda Robinson, a bride-elect herself, arrived early for the ceremony. She wore a smart beige dinner dress, simply tailored with trimming of steel cut beads. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Moore sat near the middle of the church, Mrs. Moore in black. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Clifton entered together, Mrs. Clifton, smart in white chiffon.

"Rowlett Paine accompanied his daughter, Miss Annabelle Paine, who wore a white shirtwaist dress. . . . Mr. and Mrs. James Fourmy of Hammond, La., uncle and aunt of the bride, were accompanied by their young son, Jimmy Fourmy. Mrs. Fourmy wore a light green lace dress, and a purple orchid corsage at her shoulder. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Jack Harris, the latter wearing black chiffon softened by a white lingerie collar.

"Dr. and Mrs. Jeff Justis hurried in just before the ceremony. Mrs. Justis in a white dress splashed with orange and brown flowers. . . . One of the most attractive outfits was worn by Miss Valerie Montgomery, in fire engine red with a tiny white hat embroidered in red and green.

"Mrs. Frank Latham wore a black and white print. She sat near her daughter, Mrs. Percy Perkins in a becoming orchid linen. "Mrs. Joseph D. Fleming's black dinner dress was enhanced by its white yoke of embroidered organza. She was with her daughter, Miss Blanche Fleming, in a smart red and white print. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hitchings, arriving late, stood in the back of the church, Mrs. Hitchings in a white dress printed with red and black stripes.

"Dr. and Mrs. J. Harley Harris, Mrs.

Monroe Spinster Club Has 'Kicking Out' Party For Miss Martha Jane Hill

Clever Program Given With Hawaii As Theme

Bride-Elect Responds With Poem In Unique Affair Held Aboard Brown Kraft

Hawaii, land of romance, song and flowers, was the theme selected by members of the Spinster club when they entertained with a "kicking out" party for Miss Martha Jane Hill who became the bride of Captain Hugh Gordon Glasgow at a brilliant ceremony at Grace Episcopal church Saturday night.

The Brown Kraft was the scene of this unique affair. The cabin was adorned with flaming red blossoms with Miss Hill the central figure in the group of hostesses who sang, "Aloha," Hawaiian song of farewell. At this time a lei of tropical blossoms was placed around Miss Hill's neck in true island fashion.

A distinct feature of the evening's program was Miss Hill's poem written as a sort of penalty for forsaking the state of spinsterhood. The poem, entitled "The Maiden Voyage," follows:

Well, Spinsters, guess I'm number three,
Here's another party and here's my fee.
I'll be walking the gangplank Saturday night
To take a voyage with a captain for life.
So to you Captain Calvert I give this ship
And to your crew I give some tips.
Lesson number one is simple, but sure
If a son of the army you will secure
Dine him and wine him and remember
Three C's
Charming, cute, and cuddlesome you must always be.
Lesson number two is a little harder to do
'Cause if he's the one you must be true.
Lesson number three should bring him around
And before you know it you're altar bound.
So fair maids don't be sad
For all of you there's intended some lad.
Come along gals and follow number three
The whistle has blown and tho' a gale's at sea
Can't answer for you, but it's "I do"
for me.

The sum of five dollars must be paid by members when they are "kicked out" of the club. Miss Hill presented her five dollar bill in novel manner. It formed the sail for a miniature ship bearing the name, "Matrimony."

A beautifully embossed wedding cake surmounted with figurines of a bride and bridegroom was cut following the serving of supper at a long flower banked table in the ship's cabin. Twenty-five red, white and blue streamers attached to lucky symbols radiated from the cake to the edge of the table. Each one present drew one of the favors.

Those present in addition to Miss Hill, were: Misses Gloria Frances Major, Violet Meyer, Jane Dawkins, Dorothy Graves, Dorothy Calvert, Beverly Russell, Nan Buckner, Margie Farmer, Roberta Neel, Mary Louise Fudickar, Betty Reily, Margaret McHenry, Carrie Jo Hill, Mildred Beard, Clara Virginia Terrie, Jo McCranie, Anna Lee Russell, Jean Hale and Mrs. J. E. Thornhill.

Miss Hill received the traditional silver thimble bearing the inscription "Miss Hill, Spinster, 9-2-42."

Members of the Delhi Garden club were hostess to their husbands Thursday night at a most delightful dinner party given at the Community club. The long table was attractively decorated with lovely flowers and place cards for fifty. Mrs. Rudolph Dornier presided at a table which held two beautiful baskets, one of corsages and one of boutonnieres which she graciously presented to each couple. Mrs. Snyder gave the wedding address which was followed by the song "America." Mrs. Boulware sang "My Little Gray Home In The West." Jo Ann Hurley did a tap dance and Perry Bryan sang "Three Little Sisters." Lots of fun was created by Mrs. Snyder's quiz program and the club was complimented upon the success of its effort by Mr. Woodard and Mr. Farmer.

Mr. M. E. Warner, a former resident of this city, is a patient in the St. Francis Sanitarium where he is recuperating from an operation. He will be glad to have his friends call. His room number is 123.

Mrs. Moore's Address Features Club Meeting

Principles Of This Country's Pan-American Policies Told In Interesting Talk

The Monroe Literary club met for the first meeting of the year in the home of Mrs. A. B. Colmer. Each member answered roll call with the name of a South American republic. After a short business meeting presided over by the president, Mrs. A. B. Colmer, the program chairman, Mrs. R. E. Wilson, introduced Mrs. W. L. Moore who gave a brief review of the history and geography of the two American continents.

She said in part: "In his inaugural address on March 4, 1933, President Roosevelt set forth the principle that would govern the foreign policy of his administration in the following terms: 'In the field of world policy I would dedicate this nation to the policy of the good neighbor—the neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors.' The policy of the good neighbor as thus enunciated by President Roosevelt was general in scope and applicable to all countries. But the term has come to have a more or less particular application to the relations of the United States with the other republics of the American continent. With respect to the policy of the United States in its relations with the states of Latin America, this statement was reiterated a few weeks later in an address before a special Pan-American day session of the governing board of the Pan-American Union on April 12, 1933.

"After repeating the principles of his foreign policy set forth in his inaugural address, President Roosevelt said, 'Never before has the significance of the word, "good neighbor" been so manifest in international relations. Never have the need and benefit of neighborly cooperation in every form of human activity been so evident as they are today. Friendship among nations as among individuals calls for constructive efforts to muster the forces of humanity in order that an atmosphere of close understanding and cooperation may be cultivated. It involves mutual obligations and responsibilities, for it is only by sympathetic respect for the rights of others and a scrupulous fulfillment of their corresponding obligations by each member of the community that a true fraternity can be maintained. The essential qualities of a true Pan-Americanism must be the same as those which constitute a good neighbor, namely, mutual understanding and, through such understanding, a sympathetic appreciation of the other's point of view. It is only in this manner that we can hope to build up a system of which confidence, friendship and good-will are the cornerstones.'

"These declarations set forth the basis of a marked change in the policy of the United States toward the other republics of the American continent. A modification of the pre-existing attitude had already become evident during the administration of President Hoover, when changes in several basic respects were made in the policy of the United States toward the other American republics; but since 1933 this change has been considerably accelerated and broadened both in the political and in the economic fields.

"One of the most valuable adjuncts in promoting the solidarity of the Americas is the existence of permanent offices or agencies, which function on a continuous basis and serve to give practical application to the conclusions and principles formulated at the conferences. First among these permanent organizations is the Pan-American Union. Created at the First International Conference of American States by resolution of April 14, 1890, the union in its inception was merely a bureau for the compilation of commercial statistics and data on customs, laws and regulations. Its growth reflects the progress of the Pan-American movement. As the scope of the international conferences has broadened, so also have the activities of the Pan-American Union. Additional functions have been assumed by exspecialists in these fields being invited to the United States and authorities from this country visiting the countries of Latin America. The division also cooperates with private organizations interested in developing inter-American activities, and promotes the interchange of educational motion pictures. On August 16, 1940, the council of national defense established the office for coordination of commercial and cultural relations between the American American republics, which, among other things was entrusted with formulation and execution of a program in cooperation with the state department which by effective use of governmental and private facilities in such fields as the arts and sciences, education and travel, the radio, the press and motion pictures, will further national defense and strengthen the bonds between the United States and the other nations of the western hemisphere."

During the social hour iced drinks, sandwiches and cakes were served by the hostesses to the following members: Mrs. P. H. Butler, Mrs. A. B. Colmer, Mrs. W. T. Ellis, Mrs. W. L. Jones, Mrs. P. E. Massey, Mrs. Floyd Matthews, Mrs. W. M. Mitchell, Mrs. R. P. McKay, Mrs. M. W. Montgomery, Mrs. W. L. Moore, Mrs. M. L. Padgett, Mrs. R. O. Ware and Mrs. R. E. Wilson.

Many Young Women Leave For School Soon

Monroe To Be Represented At Colleges In Every Section Of The Country

September is the siren month which sounds a back-to-school tocsin. Already many members of the college set have departed and high school students are awaiting the first day of school, tomorrow, with greater zest than ever before.

Preparations for the opening of school never lose their enchantment from the days when you clutched a brand new pencil case and wore a new starched pinafore, to this moment when you're off to college with trunks simply brimming with snappy sport suits and glamorous evening gowns.

With the end of the vacation season various responsibilities again close in on the distaff side of the family. Long shopping tours are involved in equipping young hopefuls for school to say nothing of getting daughter off to college.

America's small fry go back to school this fall in a different world. Brothers and fathers have marched away to war, air-raid drills will replace the familiar fire-drills, mother worries over ration cards and dad, if he is still at home, is weighed down with responsibilities and especially so if he happens to be an air-raid warden.

Monroe will be represented at colleges and universities in every section of the country this year. Miss Joan Boardman will be off for the University of Wisconsin; Miss Gay Noe will attend the University of Arizona in Tucson; Miss Betty Lee Engstrom and Rose Elaine Masur are off for Stephens college in Columbia, Mo.; Joyce Siegle will attend the University of Texas. SERIAL STORY OF BRIGHTNESS GONE

BY HOLLY WATTERSON

COPYRIGHT, 1942. NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER V
Martin's letter was perfect, Candace decided. She rushed home and locked herself in her room, there to read and reread its contents through the long afternoon. She left it only once, to go down to the kitchen for a talk with Mrs. Hobbs, and after a conference during which she felt it necessary to explain shyly not once but several times that the expected guest was Peter a friend, she felt sure of a dinner fit for Martin.

She had now only to invite him. That would be the natural thing to do, invite him for dinner, since in that country there were few places for public dining. But she must make the reason clear in a nice way of course, she must not let him think her too eager. In her relief she was now swinging the other way and was wishing she might punish him a little for those days he had made her wait.

She told herself she would have liked to wait a day or so before answering his letter, but decided against that as being discourteous, she refused to acknowledge a fear that if she did he might get it too late and might not then be able to come on Sunday after all.

She spent the evening composing a note that in primness and formality equalled his own. When it was finally sealed and ready she thought she was being very severe when instead of dashing out immediately she decided to wait until morning to post it.

They met promptly two, Martin trying to live out his fiction that he had just "happened" to be in the neighborhood—even though the train on which he arrived was virtually an express out of New York—and Candace here, that it was as Peter's friend that she was extending to him the hospitality of Tuckaways. And there was little in the atmosphere that would help to break them down into a more normal attitude.

The big dining room, intended for large groups seemed empty with only two people in it, and Mrs. Hobbs, the importance of the occasion having been impressed on her, had placed them at either end of the long table so that each was as though marooned on a tiny island of propriety, conversing furtively across a frozen sea of white.

In daydreaming forward to this occasion she had imagined herself and Martin exchanging light banter, herself a fascinating hostess and Martin an impossible blend of suavity and boyish charm, the reality was bitterly disappointing. She felt very young and gauche, and Martin was an embarrassed youth who ate absent-mindedly in silence, or who frowned and cleared his throat as though about to say something portentous and then ended up as likely as not with an inane remark on the weather. She was relieved when the meal was over and they could leave the table.

But the whole afternoon stretched ahead, a yawning gap that had to be filled. It was so hot a day that the cool north terrace beckoned invitingly, but that would mean trying to make conversation and the thought of that in her tongue-tied state was appalling. Golf was out of the question since that meant green fees and she didn't want Martin to have to spend the money; but tennis?

They had their own courts, and there was sure to be an extra racket of Peter's somewhere about and a pair of his shorts or slacks. The slacks with which Martin accepted left her feeling unhappily that he too had been dreading their afternoon alone together; the occasion was scarcely living up to her romantic dream of it.

Out on the courts, away from the anxious solicitude of Mrs. Hobbs and the empty oppressiveness of the house, things were better. They grew hot and their clothes clung damply to their sweating skins, but their frozen self-consciousness too had melted. They rallied each other cheerfully, they even jeered an unlucky or poor shot. By the time the game ended the last vestige of constraint between them had vanished.

One ball that had been knocked over the wire netting into the woods eluded capture. "It has to be just about here," Candace insisted, "I lined it up with the maple tree and that old stump."

Having retrieved the others, Martin had come over to help find this one. The ground where they stood was covered with a creeper and they were swishing the vines gently back and forth with the heads of their rackets.

Miss Dormon Addresses Garden Club Members

Highway Beautification Consultant Presents Interesting Talk With Pictures

All things hoped for and the pleasant hour anticipated were more than fulfilled when Miss Caroline Dormon addressed members of Welcome Garden Club and their guests at the Frances Hotel last week. Miss Dormon, highway beautification consultant, and author of "Wild Flowers of Louisiana," gave an excellent lecture on "Southern Trees and Wild Flowers" while her sister, Mrs. Virginia Miller, showed beautiful colored slides taken in various parts of the state and at their interesting home, Briarwood, at Saline, La.

Miss Dormon, who has been talking and writing on plant life for 25 years, said in part: "The fine things of life are now at stake and we must work to counteract the brute force. It is the gardener's sacred duty to keep alive the beauty of flowers for our men in the armed forces. Our Southland was formerly a myriad of wild flowers, many of which have been entirely destroyed. About the only way to preserve what are left is for each garden club to purchase a small nearby area where there are wild flowers, preserve them and put out more. Write to the department of conservation and they will furnish information on plants. Many cannot be successfully moved. If you cannot give the plant what it requires in soil, moisture, and drainage just remember to look, love and leave it."

"Many beautiful trees and plants along our highway have been destroyed. We must now preserve what we have left. Some of the plants that should adorn our highways are red-bud with yellow jasmine and wild plum, dogwood, hedges of yupon or crabapple, and wild roses along sloping banks. They grow unattended. After all nature is our best landscape gardener. Among the trees that add color to the picture in autumn are blackgum, maple, pines, a dozen varieties of holly, 30 or more varieties of hawthorn with red berries, and 6 species of magnolia."

Miss Dormon praised the beauty of the Ouachita river and urged the gardeners to beautify its banks with native plants. The most beautiful pictures shown were those of Louisiana iris grown at Briarwood, some of which were eight inches across. There were red, blue, lavender, rose, pink, yellow and white. The women were urged to plant iris seed and watch for unusual blossoms, as one has no idea what they will get. Plants from seed will bloom the second year.

Unusual among the flower arrangements brought by club members was one of white polygonella interspersed with purple gerardia. The polygonella resembles heather, but really belongs to the buck-wheat family. The gerardia, as many other wild flowers, cannot be transplanted. It is semi-parasitic.

The business session was presided over by Mrs. John Harper, at which time the club decided to hold a Victory tea and flower show in the home of Mrs. M. C. McDonald, the proceeds to go to the U. S. O. and to contribute $5.00 towards sponsoring a flower-judging school in Monroe this fall.

Mrs. James A. Noy, guest from Monroe Garden club, discussed in an interesting manner the need of beautifying the grounds at the new navigation school. Welcome Garden club voted unanimously to help with this worthy project, and Miss Dormon graciously offered her services.

The study group will meet with Mrs. H. V. Collins at 10 a.m. Monday, September 14.

Members present were: Mesdames J. C. Anders, E. M. Baber, F. E. Black, A. R. Butler, D. D. Clark, Curtis Freeman, V. S. Garnett, Fred Hancock, John Harper, E. B. Johnson, W. L. COMMITTEE'S RUBBER REPORT IS ATTACKED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A Senate agriculture subcommittee advocating the manufacture of rubber from farm crops declared today that the Baruch committee "has not met this question squarely" but decided not to seek a vote at present to override President Roosevelt's veto of their bill for a separate rubber agency.

Chairman Gillette, Democrat, Iowa, and Senators Norris, Independent, Nebraska, and McNary, Republican, Oregon, issued a joint statement taking particular exception to the Baruch committee's recommendation that there be no further substitutions in present plans for synthetic rubber manufacture.

"In effect," the senators declared, "the recommendations are for freezing of the present production plans for synthetic rubber and almost complete lack of recommendation for steps to correct the failure in the future to bring the agricultural resources of the nation into the field of synthetic rubber production."

"The object of the bill which the president vetoed was solely to extend the program so as to include agricultural products in the manufacture of butadiene from which rubber could be produced."

"The Baruch committee has not met this question squarely. We think it is the only issue involved in the bill which the president has vetoed."

In his veto message, Mr. Roosevelt expressed the opinion that the bill would "block the progress of the war production program" by decentralizing control of rubber production.

WARNING IS ISSUED TO DRAFT DEFERREES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—(AP)—A warning that deferred draft registrants who failed to support the war effort would be reclassified immediately came today from selective service headquarters.

An order signed by Director Lewis B. Hershey and appearing in the federal register laid down this rule:

"Whenever the director of selective service advises a local board that a deferred registrant or a group of deferred registrants is not supporting or is adversely affecting the war effort or the national health, safety or interest, the local board shall immediately terminate the deferment and consider anew the classification of such registrant or registrants."

Draft officials made no explanation of the purpose of the order, but it was assumed to be connected with the government's effort to spur war production through tighter control of manpower.

Motorists, only a few decades ago, were advised to carry dusters, goggles, raincoats, wind cuffs, visor caps and leggings. One hundred miles a day was a real accomplishment of driving in those days.

FIRST SNOW OF FALL RECEIVED

its 18th day, the Russians announced they had once more stopped the Germans on the critical area west of the city, where the Germans advanced in frontal assaults last week until their war machine was halted Friday.

Wave upon wave of German soldiers—the Russians said again the invaders were numerically superior to the defenders—dashed against the Russian defenses in continuous attacks without gaining ground, the communique revealed.

The communique declared: "German Fascist troops are continuously attacking our positions. Soviet troops are repulsing attacks launched by the numerically superior enemy forces."

Southwest of Stalingrad, it was officially reported, 6,000 Germans have been "wiped out" in the last five days; west of Stalingrad about 4,000 Germans have been killed.

The communique did not mention the northwest sector, where the Germans have increased their pressure in the last day or two.

As the epic siege of Stalingrad ground through its 18th day, a new and deadly foe of Hitler appeared in the high passes of the Caucasus mountains. It was snow. The first fall of approaching winter, which the Germans learned last year to dread.

The shifting of men from other fronts to the seething cauldron invited Russian attacks on the weakened fronts. The Reds struck vigorously and successfully along the Volkhov, between Leningrad and Moscow, routing the Germans for several miles, and once more on the central front near the capital. Here, too, the Russians advanced.

In the foothills of the Caucasus range near the Grozny oil fields, the Russian defenses stiffened and destroyed all bridgeheads the Germans had thrown across the Terek river near Mordok. Above and beyond that front were the whitened mountain gaps through which the Axis Alpines must fight to reach the fabulous riches of Baku on the Caspian.

It would be rash to say that Stalingrad could hold like Leningrad and Moscow. Its defense positions were far weaker, and the terrain was more hospitable to the attacking Germans. It appeared probable, though, that the resolute stand was weakening the German army to such an extent that its next offensive would lack the punch of those of the preceding three years.

The whole dogged resistance of the Russians had delayed Hitler's timetable so much that the Stalingrad campaign appeared likely to ring down the curtain on this year's war in Russia. Winter was moving in fast.

With the city of Stalin perilously besieged from three sides, it was disclosed that another area of sharp fighting has developed far to the north.

In the area of Sinyavino, a railway town on the west side of the Volkhov river below Leningrad, the Russians said the Germans have thrown in large forces of reserves but that all Nazi attacks were stopped and thrown back.

The enemy lost in killed and wounded about 5,000 men," the communique said of this new battle area.

The sinking of an enemy submarine in the Barents sea was announced by the Russians. No details were given.

At the southern end of the front, in the Mordok area where the snows of approaching winter already have fallen on the Caucasian mountains, the Russians said they were fighting the enemy on the southern bank of a river (presumably the Terek).

"Soviet artillerymen destroyed three mortar batteries and wiped out a company of enemy infantry," the communique said.

There the Germans seek the Grozny oil fields.

In fighting that raged early Saturday, the Russians had stopped cold all of the attacks by the men of Nazi Marshal Von Bock.

Everywhere the approaches to the Russian positions were littered with carnage and smoking, twisted German machines. The army newspaper Red Star declared German losses at Stalingrad were the largest of the war and declared the fascists literally were "wading knee deep in blood" at places.

As the Germans fell, fresh reserves drawn from other fronts rushed into the breaches under orders of Hitler to take the industrial city, regardless of cost. Overhead, the sky was darkened by hundreds of dive-bombers supporting crawling masses of tanks, spearheading the infantry masses.

The Germans said heavy fighting continued "within the fortifications" of Stalingrad but claimed no specific gains. Russian relief attacks were declared repulsed and Red supply lines were reported attacked heavily. The fall of the last fortress south of the Black sea base of Novorossiisk was reported along with a break-through of Russian positions along the Terek river near the Grozny oil fields.

Despite the tremendous exertion of the Red army to hold Stalingrad and inflict irreparable losses on the Germans, other forces were strong enough to press successful offensives on the central front before Moscow and on the Volkhov sector south of Leningrad.

In the Caucasus, the Germans who captured Novorossiisk attempted to drive south along the narrow passage between the mountains and the Black sea. A fine highway leads to Batum through Tuapse and by subjugating it, the Germans might outflank the entire 18,000 foot Caucasus range and force south of the mountains toward Baku on the Caspian.

Around Mordok, German efforts to extend their deepest penetration failed and dispatches indicated the Germans who had crossed the Terek were in grave danger; the Russians resolutely were cleaning up the entire group that crossed the waterway and had destroyed all bridges thrown across the river.

The first snows of the Caucasus hampered operations of German Alpine troops and at one place the Russians said they surrounded and wiped out a group of 150.

The Russians on the gun-bristling heights around Stalingrad were able to see their beleaguered city of factories, tanks and tractors they were defending. At no point had the enemy made significant new progress toward Stalingrad up to noon Saturday, despite continuous hammering. At some places, the Germans hurled as many as 50,000 soldiers against a single narrow sector. Slight dents were made in the lines here and there, but no breakthrough was reported and the torture inflicted on the enemy flanks was declared terrific.

The German air force was greatly superior on the Stalingrad front but Soviet land troops were reported standing up to the greatest weight of bombs the Stukas could throw. Red artillery was reported taking a bloody toll. Heavy German barrages also were laid down on the entrenched Russians. Red Star said 1,500 men and 30 tanks were destroyed in one German attack, supported by 300 bombers.

"The flower of German aviation" has been sent to the Stalingrad front, Red Star said. Southwest of the city the Russians said they destroyed 29 of 60 storming tanks in a 4-hour battle around a hill.

The newest Russian offensive on the Volkhov river sector probably was made possible by the shift of German troops to the Stalingrad area. The Soviet attacks near the railway station of Sinyavino, on the west side of the Volkhov river south of Leningrad, began several days ago but were first announced Friday night. Sinyavino is on the rail line between Chudovo, northeast of Volkhov, and Volkhovsk near Leningrad.

The first attack took three populated points which the Germans had fortified with 80 gun emplacements. The approaches of which were well mined. The Germans were thrown back several miles, but they quickly brought up reinforcements to stem the advance.

The Soviets then attacked the flanks. The latest reported success was the capture of a basic communication line. German counter-attacks increased during the day.

Several more settlements were seized on the western front before Moscow and the Russians said they beat off a determined German attack on the outskirts of a big town. Of 90 German tanks that attacked, 49 were destroyed, the high command said. Strong, though not massive, plane flights supported the Germans.

Nothing was reported directly from Rzhnev, 130 miles northwest of Moscow, where the Russians last were declared holding the northern outskirts.

Hungarian attacks in the Voronezh sector on the upper Don were reported repulsed in a two day battle west of the river. The Germans apparently still occupy some positions close to the city and the Red army has been able to drive almost directly behind them.

KILLED IN COLLISION

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Virgil J. Elmore, 54, who operated a chain of 40 five and 10-cent stores in Alabama, Mississippi and Florida, was killed today when a car in which he was riding and a truck collided at an intersection.

INFLATION CURB PLAN UNDECIDED

Congressional Leaders Fail To Agree On Form Of Legislation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A further round of conferences today failed to produce an agreement among congressional leaders on terms of the legislation demanded by President Roosevelt to curb inflation but Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky predicted it would provide specifically for control of wages as well as farm prices.

Meanwhile a labor department survey showed sharp and unseasonal increases from July 15 to Aug. 15 in the price of foods exempt from control with the cost of living index for larger cities rising 0.4 per cent for that period.

Sentiment among the congressional conferees appeared to be that a brief resolution to authorize the president to take the necessary action to hold down the cost of living, advocated by some house leaders, would be unacceptable to many members of both chambers.

Barkley reported that while "we haven't ruled out anything," the proposal to give the president general powers over wages and farm prices was "not running very strong now."

Chairman Wagner, Democrat, New York, of the senate banking committee said he did not believe the senate would accept a bill "so general as not to contain a formula for both wages and farm prices."

Senators Barkley, Wagner and Brown, Democrat, Michigan, met late in the day with Chairman Steagall, Democrat, Alabama, of the house banking committee in what Barkley described as "a purely preliminary discussion." Another session will be held tomorrow afternoon.

"I wouldn't want to predict anything at the moment, but I certainly hope we'll be able to introduce a bill by Monday," Barkley said.

The senators still were hopeful of working out in advance a bill satisfactory to house and senate but Barkley remarked that "something will have to be introduced as a starter."

Mr. Roosevelt set October 1 as the deadline for the legislation.

Barkley said it still was planned to begin hearings before the senate banking committee Tuesday. First witness will be Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, Price Administrator Leon Henderson, and William H. Davis, chairman of the war labor board.

Commenting on the survey showing increased living costs, Secretary of Labor Perkins observed that "with but a few exceptions, all foods not controlled rose more than usual at this season of the year." Lettuce prices climbed 18 per cent, butter eight per cent, eggs 12 per cent, and sweet potatoes, 14 per cent.

Since mid-May, when the general maximum price regulation became effective, price increases for uncontrolled foods averaged 10 per cent, Miss Perkins noted. Prices on controlled foods meanwhile declined 0.3 per cent.

"The total food bill went up by 1.2 per cent from July to August," she continued. "On the other hand, elements in the cost of living predominantly subject to regulation—clothing, rent, fuel, ice and house furnishings—for the most part declined slightly."

"Total costs of all uncontrolled goods and services were unchanged, while costs of items not under control rose by 1.3 per cent from July to August."

A steady decline in rents, particularly in crowded defense areas, was noted as a result of expanded federal rent control.

R. A. F. WRECKING MANY NAZI TRAINS

LONDON, Sunday, Sept. 13.—(AP)—The R. A. F. disclosed something new and destructive today in its offensive against Hitler—squadrons of night-flying trainwreckers whose "engine shooting sorties" have put a big crimp in German internal transportation.

The first night these cannon-packing Hurricanes were out on their specific mission 23 trains were attacked, the air ministry reported. Some of the locomotives were blown sky high and long strings of cars laden with inflammable war materials were destroyed. The next night all mail traffic on the German Nord system appeared halted.

The aerial trainwrecking expeditions are in addition to the regular bombing of German and German-controlled transportation systems and the two combined were declared to have caused tremendous disorganization of Germany's overburdened rail facilities.

An attack by the top-scoring Hurricane squadron of the R. A. F.'s famed one-armed flight leader, J. A. F. MacLachlan, last April sparked the idea for the night attacks on railroad trains.

Himself flying alone up the Seine from Rouen, MacLachlan dived 200 feet to attack two freight trains. Both locomotives blew up in clouds of steam.

From this starter, the air ministry said the attacks have grown until "the strain on Hitler's supply system has become increasingly acute."

As a result, it added, Hitler has been forced to rely more and more upon slow-moving canal barges and coastal shipping.

TAX SCHEDULES TO BE REOPENED

Senate Finance Committee Told More Revenue Must Be Produced

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Members of the senate finance committee, told by the treasury today that their action on the tax bill had added only $830,000,000 to the annual revenue provided by the house, indicated that they might consider further changes in the levies on individuals.

With a reopening of the tax schedules which already have been tentatively adopted, sales tax advocates hoped to revive a levy of this type and there were indications that a modified version of the Ruml "pay as you go" plan might be considered.

Calling a meeting of the committee for Monday morning, Chairman George, Democrat, Georgia, told reporters the bill was open to last minute changes but would not predict whether any would be made.

He said the treasury had estimated that as the measure stood it would raise $7,100,000,000 more direct revenue than the $17,000,000,000 provided by present laws. In addition, the treasury would collect about $1,100,000,000 from individuals and $800,000,000 from corporations annually which it would rebate later.

Total yearly collections thus would include $24,000,000,000 in revenue the treasury would retain and $1,900,000,000 in rebate receipts, or $26,000,000,000 in all.

While George said he thought the treasury's estimate of an $830,000,000 revenue committee increase over the $8,271,000,000 in the house bill was low, Senator Byrd, Democrat, Virginia, pointed out that the measure still was $1,600,000,000 short of the $8,700,000,000 in new taxes sought by the treasury.

"I hope that before the bill is reported to the senate, additional revenue will be provided which otherwise will have to be obtained by writing another tax bill in January," Byrd declared.

He favored substitution of a sales tax for the 5 per cent victory tax on all earnings over $624 a year, which the committee recently adopted. Senator Guffey, Democrat, Pennsylvania, said Simpson, on September 7.

President Takes Steps To Cure Ills Hindering War

Medicine Prescribed By Roosevelt Comes In Strong Doses

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Wide World.—The medicine President Roosevelt prescribed this week came in strong doses but he was trying to cure the ills that could cost us the war.

Until he acted, no one had managed to get on with a series of vital matters: even congress. And the American economic war, through which we have been trying to clear our path to a war already nine months old, was a full of hiccups. There was the plague of rising living costs. Farm prices and wages threatened a dizzy seesaw.

We were hampered by the lack of clarity or agreement on the rubber shortage, a subject upon which conflating official and so-called expert opinions had been a dime a dozen.

Pending stern action, we had kept on wearing the skin off our tires everywhere except in the east where driving was limited by the rationing of gasoline and scarce tires.

When at last the president holding a big stick in one hand, offered us the medicine with the other, decisive action seemed at hand.

This is what the president did:

He asked congress to pass legislation authorizing him to stabilize farm prices, saying that at the same time he did that, he would stabilize wages.

But he set the deadline for the requested congressional authorization at October 1, warning:

"In the event that the congress should fail to act, and act adequately, I shall accept the responsibility, and I will act."

He announced he would put into effect as "rapidly as arrangements can be made" a set of recommendations from his special rubber committee which included nationwide gasoline rationing and drastic restrictions on civilian motoring, both intended to conserve rubber.

He decreed an end to payment of double time rates for work on any particular day of the week—such as Saturday, Sunday or holidays—although double time payments for work on a seventh consecutive day is permitted.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson backed the president's effort to stabilize living costs by promising his office hereafter would enforce price controls "to the hilt."

The emphatic tone of the president's request for farm price stabilization was greeted by sharp congressional outcries. Senator Charles McNary (D., Ore.) virtually had placed a pistol at congress' head—by week's end the wheels were in motion in a plan to put through strong measures.

It remained to be seen, however, whether congress could meet the presidential request by October 1.

But the president made it clear he considered stabilization of profits just as necessary as such control over wages and prices, a strong hint to congress which is still struggling along with a tax program.

The president's special rubber committee, which he appointed August 6 to bring order to the chaotic and often poorly informed opinions, made this statement to him in its report Thursday:

"We find the existing situation to be so dangerous that unless corrective measures are taken immediately this country will face both a military and civilian collapse. The naked facts present a warning that dare not be ignored."

OPA officials estimated it would be a "number of weeks" before that agency could begin rationing gasoline on a nationwide basis.

Bernard M. Baruch, head of the War Industries Board in the last war, was chairman of the rubber committee whose recommendations also urged expansion of the present synthetic rubber production program from an annual total now of 705,000 tons to a contemplated figure of 1,100,000.

The nation's 5 million commercial trucks, buses and taxicabs will come under government control—which will include nationwide rationing of gasoline, tires, tubes and accessories for all such vehicles—on November 15.

The first taste of what may lie ahead for workers needed in the war effort came with this action by Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower commission:

He declared 12 western states a critical labor area in which men in the copper and other non-ferrous metals and lumber industries may not switch to another job without a "certificate of separation" from the United States employment service.

The plan, which sets up appeal machinery to safeguard workers and employers, is designed to halt wasteful purging and migration of workers to better-paid positions from lumbering and mining operations essential to war production.

ARREST MADE FOR CALDWELL SHERIFF

J. R. Green of Monroe was arrested here yesterday afternoon by Ouachita sheriff's deputies at the request of Sheriff George "Buddy" Erskine of Caldwell parish, who said Green was wanted at Columbia on a charge of obtaining $50 under false pretense. He was being held in the Ouachita parish jail late yesterday, pending arrival of Caldwell authorities.

Alex Taylor, 38-year-old Monroe negro, was also arrested by sheriff's deputies here yesterday for failing to register for selective service. He is being held for federal authorities.

Adaptation Of Novel Is Hit Picture

Monty Woolley, Roddy McDowall, Anne Baxter Starred In New Film

HAILED as one of the best films of the year, 20th Century-Fox's filmization of Nevil Shute's great novel, "The Pied Piper," opens today at the Paramount theater. Monty Woolley, Roddy McDowall and Anne Baxter are featured in the enthralling story of the Englishman who led a band of helpless children across embattled France to England and safety.

The novel, which first appeared serially in Collier's magazine and later in condensed form in Readers' Digest has won the highest kind of praise from the book reviewers. And the film is said to have faithfully reproduced all the tragic war, tenderness and humor of the book, while adding a few touches only the screen can give.

Under the directorial aegis of Irving Pichel, the film tells in graphic detail the difficulties encountered in their perilous journey. Starting in the south of France as the gigantic German attack was launched in the tragic month of June, 1940, the Englishman manages to make his halting way home, shepherding his straggling group of youngsters right under the very nose of the dreaded Gestapo.

Monty Woolley, who scored so heavily in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," essays a new dramatic role in "The Pied Piper." Cast as the crochety Englishman, the bewhiskered former Yale drama professor is at his best as he outwits the Gestapo, while the children often outwit him.

Roddy McDowall, the neophyte Hux of "How Green Was My Valley," and lovely Anne Baxter also received praise for grand performances from preview critics.

The supporting honors are carried off by Otto Preminger and J. Carroll Nash, while the production was in the capable hands of Nunnally Johnson, who also wrote the touching screenplay.

Combining the breath-taking pace, the rich humor and the warm romance of the book, "The Pied Piper" looms as one of the outstanding pictures of the year.

M'KENZIE TELLS OF RUNOFF PLANS

Candidate Says Incumbent Was Repudiated In First Primary

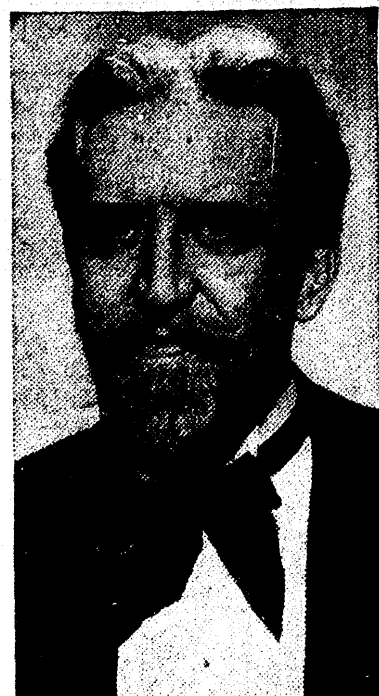

C. E. McKenzie, runner-up to Newt V. Mills in the first primary for the congressional nomination from the Fifth congressional district, yesterday issued the formal statement which he said Tuesday night that he would make later this week.

Mr. McKenzie's statement concerning the second campaign follows:

There can be no doubt but what the voters of this district have repudiated the incumbent, Mr. Mills. On the basis of nearly complete returns he appears to have received less than 35 per cent of the vote, meaning that two out of three of the citizens are opposed to him. This should be conclusive enough for anyone.

As I enter the runoff primary against Mr. Mills, I am first of all to express my deep appreciation to the men and women who supported me in the first primary. I believe they voted for me because they had confidence in my ability to make a good congressman. I fully realize the runoff campaign will be hard fought. The incumbent has his back to the wall and will fight to the last ditch. However, I intend to wage a tireless campaign, keeping ever before the people the political issues involved, and I want to say here and now that I have no personal animosity whatsoever against my opponent, and intend to avoid all personalities and mud-slinging.

"Between now and the runoff primary I expect to confine my cam-

Veronica Lake and Robert Preston with the sensational new find, Alan Ladd, are together Wednesday at the Capitol theater in "This Gun For Hire," a gripping melodrama.

Laurel And Hardy Now At Capitol

Comedians, Dante The Magician, Starred In 'A-Haunting We Will Go'

WITH nothing up their sleeves and nothing in their heads, except laughs aplenty, Laurel and Hardy are coming to the Capitol theater today in "A-Haunting We Will Go," a rollicking film which, judging from advance notices, abounds in practically all the ingredients of solid entertainment—magic, murder, mirth, action and romance.

Just when we need it most, it seems that Stan and Ollie have come up with their hilarious best. And something new has been added in the person of Dante, the great magician, who performs feats never before seen on the screen.

Ravishing Sheila Ryan and John Shelton are teamed in the romantic interludes. They are just two people happy in love, until Stan and Ollie's misadventures inexorably encompass their lives, too.

But it looks this time as if all of Stan and Ollie's bungling will have to be forgiven, because it inadvertently brings a gang of criminals before the bar of justice and threatens to bring down the house.

A 20th Century-Fox production, the film was produced by Sol M. Wurtzel and directed by Alfred Weikert. The screenplay was written by Lou Breslow from an original story by Breslow and Stanley Rauh.

Nothing in their sleeves—nothing in their heads! Nothing... but laughs as Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy with Dante the Magician and Sheila Ryan get all tangled up in mirth and black magic in "A-Haunting We Will Go," now showing at the Capitol theater.

Luring a ghost from the grave and putting a killer's neck in the noose is "Enemy Agent Meets Elery Queen," playing Friday only at the Capitol theater, and starring William Gargan as Elery Queen, and Margaret Landray.

CARDINALS TIE UP NATIONAL LEAGUE LEAD

REDBIRDS TAKE 2 TO 1 VICTORY OVER BROOKLYN

Lanier Keeps Dodgers Under Control; Kurowski's Homer Wins

By Judson Bailey
BROOKLYN, Sept. 12.—(P)—The St. Louis Cardinals stormed to another victory over the bewildered Brooklyn Dodgers today, 2 to 1, and moved into an exact tie for the National League lead, ending a reign of 144 consecutive days during which the Dodgers had held uncontested control of first place.

It was the 29th triumph in 34 games for the rampaging Redbirds and seemed to convince most of the crowd of 27,511 fans, including 1,573 service men, that the Cardinals were capable of going on to the pennant from here.

A home run by Rookie George Kurowski with one on in the second inning provided all the runs St. Louis needed to win as Lefty Max Lanier, the persistent Dodger jinx, pitched five-hit ball against his one-time roommate, Southpaw Max Macdon.

The ball game, however, was vastly different from yesterday because all of the Dodgers except Manager Leo Durocher and Coach Chuck Dressen were in the thick of the battle till the end, keeping the outcome uncertain and the home fans hopeful.

Durocher and Dressen would have been on the front line to the finish, too, except that Umpire Al Barlick thumbed both of them off the field for a rowdy and prolonged argument on a decision at first base in the seventh inning.

This got the crowd excited, but had no effects on the score because Lanier smothered the Dodgers every time they reared their heads.

In nailing his 13th victory against seven defeats, he lacked the unquestionable supremacy which Big Morton Cooper had shown yesterday in shutting out Brooklyn, 3 to 0, on three hits. Cooper never gave the Dodgers a smell. Today Lanier let them be tempted and then slapped them down, not once or twice but repeatedly.

After Kurowski had given the Cardinals their life line in the second, the Dodgers fought back for their

Pennant Races At A Glance

(By Associated Press)
The New York Yankees can clinch their 13th American league pennant today, but the National league race has developed into a neck and neck affair between the Brooklyn Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cards moved into a first-place tie with Brooklyn yesterday by tripping the Dodgers, 2-1, on George Kurowski's two-run homer. It was the final meeting of the co-leaders, each of whom has 14 games left to play.

The Yankees beat the Chicago White Sox, 7-1, to stay nine games ahead of the Boston Red Sox, who bumped the Cleveland Indians, 8-6.

Since the Yanks have only 12 games to play and the Red Sox have only 11, any combination of three New York wins or Boston losses would clinch the pennant for the Yankees.

MEHRE HUNTS WORKABLE COMBINATION FOR REBS

Greenich replaced the sophomore flash, Ray Woodward, and showed up nicely as did Jones, taking over for Dave Whitaker. Smith may be ousting Ray Poole, junior, while Webb also proved a fine prospect. The latter is in while Monk Meyers, junior letterman, recovers from a cold.

The first string showed good form after a half hour of work, but the second unit gave Mehre a bad taste.

"Too many new men," he said, "we're going back to fundamentals. I'm glad we've got two more weeks to get ready for the campaign."

Louis-Conn Go Formally Set For Yankee Stadium

By Whitney Martin
NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(P)—Two soldiers who on October 12 will try to slug each other into unconsciousness met today for the first time since they were matched to fight for the heavyweight championship for the benefit of the army emergency relief fund, and they behaved like long-parted buddies.

Sergeant Joe Louis, wearing corporal's stripes as "Ah didn't have time to sew on the new ones," arrived this morning from Fort Riley, Kans., on the gamut of gaudy red caps in the dim caverns of the Grand Central station train shed, left a group of young Canadian aviators speechless at the unexpected glimpse of him, and headed for Promoter Mike Jacobs' office.

There he met Billy Conn, the party of the second part in the charity contest, which, as previously announced by the Associated Press, will be held at Yankee stadium.

They greeted each other affably, then for a few minutes stood self-consciously, Louis spreading out a newspaper and avidly perusing first the sports page, then the comics. The embarrassment quickly wore off, however, and before long the two were chatting animatedly, pairing off together for the walk to a car which took them, seated side by side, to the war department's office of public information.

There they sat in on a meeting attended by army officials, Jacobs and the Sports Writers' committee, at which the announcement of the Yankee stadium site was confirmed as a better-than-average Kentucky team.

ARMY ALL-STARS DEFEAT NEW YORK GIANTS, 16 TO 0

Soldiers Take Command Early In Game; Pingel Leads Mates In Win

By Gayle Talbot
NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(P)—Driving 77 yards for a touchdown the first time they got their hands on the ball, the Eastern Army All-Stars poured in overwhelming man-power from their huge squad to trample the New York Professional Giants, 16 to 0 today.

The Giants never threatened seriously to score on Colonel Bob Neyland's hand-picked huskies, their best shot being a futile try for a field goal from the 45-yard line late in the third period. The soldiers, running and passing with deadly effect, scored touchdowns in the first and fourth quarters and tacked on a field goal in the second.

Exporters And Missions Win

FORT WORTH, Tex., Sept. 12.—(P)—Young strong-armed Claud Horton jerked the Fort Worth Cats back into the playoff with Shreveport tonight when he pitched and helped bat the Cats to a 2-1 victory over the Sports.

Working with determination the big righthander limited the visitors to five singles, two of which came after two were out in the ninth, and he delivered a hit that drove in one of the Fort Worth runs. The one run made off him resulted from the one error committed by the otherwise perfect functioning defense.

Beaumont broke a 1-1 tie in the rowdy fourth with two runs, and the Missions came right back to score five times in their half of the same frame to take a 6-3 lead. The Shippers added another run in the eighth. Each club used three pitchers.

NARRAGANSETT SPECIAL CAPTURED BY WHIRLWAY

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 12.—(P)—Warren Wright's Whirlaway won the $25,000 Narragansett Special at Narragansett park today.

With his chief opponent, Alabaz, scratched from the race, Whirlaway came from far back with his usual burst of lightning to win by two lengths over the Texas-owned Boyss from Tom Heard, Jr.'s stable.

Whirlaway ran the mile and three sixteenths in 1:56 2-5, excellent time on footing regarded only as "good."

He carried 130 pounds and was piloted by George Woolf in picking up the $24,000 summer end of the purse to boost his all-time money winning record to $491,126.

A survey has shown that 14,000,000 of the 16,500,000 inhabitants of Mexico are either full-blooded Indians or have part Indian blood.

YANKEES CRUSH WHITE SOX WITH FIVE-RUN RALLY

World Champions Can Clinch American League Race In Games Today

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—(P)—Spud Chandler celebrated his 33rd birthday anniversary today by pitching the New York Yankees to a 1-1 triumph over the Chicago White Sox, a victory which left the world champions in a position to clinch their 13th American League pennant tomorrow.

The second place Boston Red Sox also won at Cleveland to remain nine games behind the Yankees, but they have only 11 games left to play and the New Yorkers have only 12.

Thus any combination of three Yankee victories and Boston defeats would put the defending champions into the world series for the sixth time in seven years. If the Yanks take two from the Indians tomorrow, the Red Sox must win both games from the White Sox to remain in the

NEVILLE NAMES NEW GRID COACH

ELGIN BOGGS TO DIRECT BENGALS COMING SEASON

Tigers To Engage In First Game In Alexandria Friday Night

Principal Paul J. Neal of Neville High school last night announced the appointment of Elgin Boggs, former Southwestern Louisiana athlete and ex-football coach at Winnboro High school, as football coach at Neville.

Coach Boggs will succeed Percy Brown, recently commissioned a first lieutenant in the army air corps, and tomorrow will take over the training duties maintained by Coach Bill Ruple until Neville officials were able to secure a successor for Brown.

Ruple had hoped for the job, but was already under contract to Baskin High school. He left here at the close of the last school term, obtained a position at Baskin, and returned here to get the Neville football candidates started on their training grid when it was announced that Brown wouldn't be back and that the Tigers were without a coach. Ruple will return to Baskin High school for the opening of the school term this week.

Coach Boggs came here from Laurel, Miss., a couple of days ago, made the acquaintance of the Tiger force and will begin actual work with his new charges tomorrow. Right now the Bengal mentor in making his home with T. Brewer Godfrey on Speed drive. Godfrey played football under Boggs at Winnboro a few years ago. Coach Boggs is married and is the father of two children, a boy and a girl.

Coach Boggs was an athlete at Southwestern at the same time Percy Brown was burning up the cinder paths for the Louisiana State university track team a dozen years ago. Boggs and Brown ran against each other in track competition, and after leaving S. L. L. Boggs went to Winnboro where he coached for five years, and turned out one undefeated eleven.

For the last few years he had been employed by the government in Civil Service and was connected with the civilian conservation corps.

Neville officials last night expressed gratification with the appointment of Boggs.

"He is a mighty fine man," Principal Neal declared, "and we know he will make us a good coach. He has the ap-

MAROON MENTOR PLEASSED WITH SQUAD'S WORKOUT

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Sept. 12.—(P)—Matching mixed first and second team men in a rough scrimmage today, Allyn McKeen, the Maroon mentor, was well pleased with the excellent spirit.

Blondie Black set the pace with brilliant running while Lamar Blount and Charles Yancey also showed well as touchdown makers. Black, Blount, Yancey and Jennings Montes composed the first team backfield. Filly Murphy was best in the second backfield. Captain Robert Patterson and Curtiss Patterson, guard, and Elbert Corley, center, played best in the line.

CONNER PREDICTS TREAT FOR FANS

Declares Football Will Be Better Than Ever From Spectator's View

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 12.—(P)—The silver lining of the warclouds hanging over college football is on display in the offices of the South-eastern conference commissioner.

Commissioner Sennett "Mike" Conner has it figured out that from now on we'll see "some of the best football—that has ever been played."

"The coaches will probably suffer on the sidelines," the husky former governor of Mississippi grinned, "because the game is going to get unorthodox, unscientific and spontaneous. But the ordinary spectator, like me, who's there to see a game and doesn't know precision, is going to have a lot more fun when somebody gets out of line, throws the standard strategy overboard and gets loose with the ball."

"If you've seen a good high school game lately you'll know what I mean."

Conner deduces all this from the fact that, especially after this year, Southeastern gridgers will go to the varsity fields with less training, as a direct result of shortened college courses, the draining off of older men to the armed services, and the possible playing of freshmen.

On this last issue the commissioner, always chary of predicting conference action, said "several proposals on the freshman question will be up for discussion and action at the conference meeting September 18."

He doesn't look for any dangerous falling off in attendance, in fact thinks there may be an increase "if the transportation situation doesn't get any worse."

Partly offsetting the gasoline and tire restrictions, he pointed out, is the noticeable policy trend towards more home and big-city games, more careful scheduling to minimize night games, especially in areas like Florida where blackouts are more likely, and the training camps in the South.

"People will keep coming as long as they can," he said, "and it's proper that they should. You can't win a war by going into mourning."

There'll continue to be material for squads, too, he opined, and went to bat for athletes continuing in school who, he said, were often the victims of a misconception.

MACK TO BATTLE SCHULTZ ON MAT PROGRAM TUESDAY

Masked Shadow And Fraley Are Billed In Supporting Role At Arena

Farmer Mack, the Maine potato cultivator, who tamed the Nebraska bad man, Mike Fraley of Omaha, here last week, will try his hand at putting another rowdy in his place when he tackles Herbie "Dutch" Schultz, the Flying Dutchman from Milwaukee, Wis., in the main event on Tuesday night's card at the Monroe Wrestling arena.

The lean Flying Dutchman, like Fraley, is a ring villain capable of any method of attack as long as he can get by with it, and Mack will be called upon to put up about the same type of battle as that of last week when he conquered the Nebraskan.

While Schultz is slated to try accomplishing what he failed to do a week ago, Fraley, always a showman, will be back on the same card for the semi-final scrap with the Masked Shadow.

The Shadow last week roughed his way to victory over Les Chapman, stocky Chicago grappler, but he is expecting a tough assignment Tuesday.

The Shadow and Fraley are of the same stripe and just about anything can happen. Even the fans, usually opposed to both, may be split into two distinct factions with their own semi-final favorite.

The Schultz-Mack main event will be a 90-minute time limit battle, two falls to win.

The curtain-raiser will be a 60-minute time limit affair, two falls to win, and Fraley, a "tape" wrestler, won't be allowed to come in the ring with his usual strip of adhesive, according to Promoter Gus Kallio.

One of Fraley's stocks of trade is a strip of adhesive tape around one wrist and the tape is used quite effectively as a weapon when the wrist is scraped sharply across an opponent's eyes. Fraley has been warned repeatedly about the tape which Kallio says must stay out of the ring Tuesday.

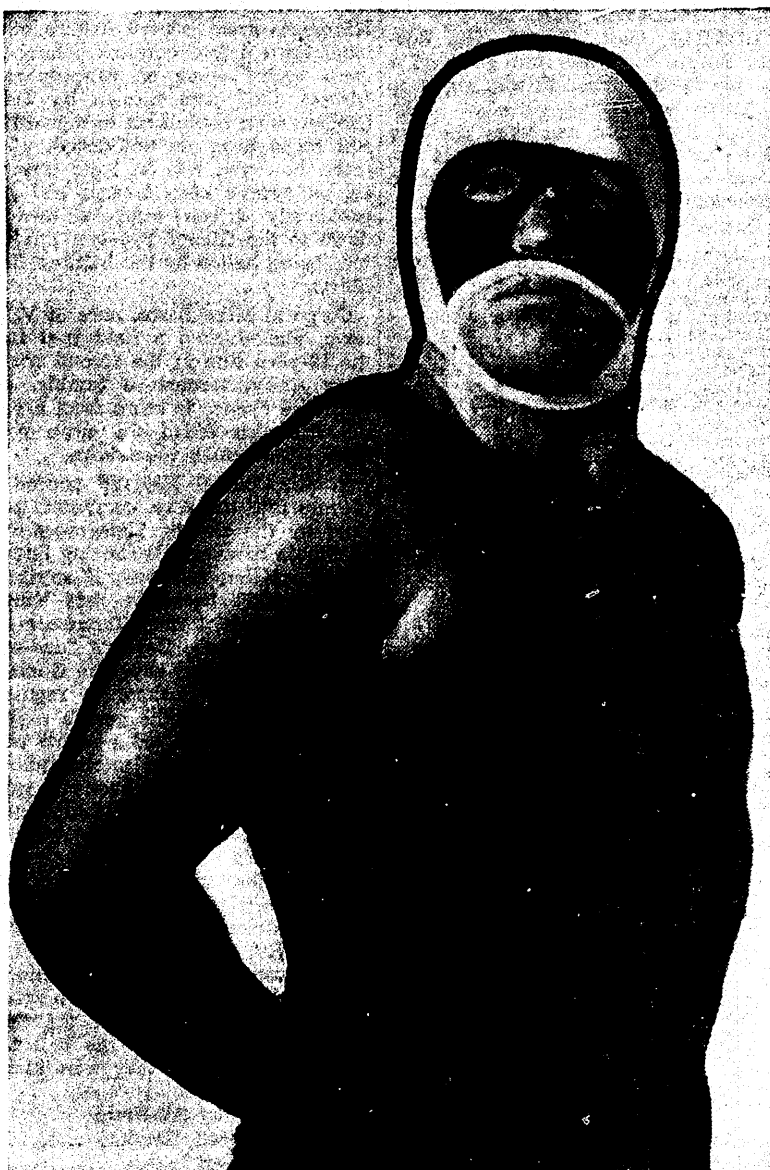

Promoter Kallio also announced all servicemen in uniform would be admitted free Tuesday. Except for the soldiers, the usual admission prices will prevail.

The great majority of all the conference squads are already enlisted in the armed forces," he demanded. "They have signed up, they're reservists, they're subject to call at any time, but many are being allowed to continue in school for the present while they follow training courses rigidly laid down by the services."

"Now they're being trained just as surely as if they were in camp. And if they are going to be here anyway, why shouldn't they play football?"

"And people should remember that they are not left in school just to finish college. They're there because they're being trained," he added. "That's an arrangement in which no preference is being given athletes."

SHADOW HAUNTS FRALEY

The Masked Shadow, mystery man of the ring, who last week conquered Les Chapman of Chicago in the semi-final event at the local arena, will again appear here Tuesday night for a meeting with Mike Fraley, rowdy Nebraskan, in what promises to be one of the wildest matches in recent weeks. The Shadow-Fraley scrap will be the semi-final on a card featuring Farmer Mack and Herbie "Dutch" Schultz.

Ouachita Lions To Invade Bossier City Friday Night

Local Gridgers Face Tough Opponent, Conqueror Of Golden Tornado Of Haynesville By 18-0 Score

The Ouachita Parish High school Lions, who showed surprising strength in beating the favored Ruston High school Boars to a 7 to 6 victory at Ruston Friday night, meet another tough customer this week when they invade Bossier City Friday for an engagement with the Bossier City High school eleven.

Bossier City is on the Ouachita schedule for the first time in the history of the schools, having replaced the Minden Crimson Tide on the Lion slate this year. Just how strong the Bossier City team really is is not certain, but to Monroe fans the fact that the B. C. aggregation stomped the Haynesville Golden Tornado, 18 to 0, Friday night should mean something. Haynesville, a Class A conference foe of Ouachita, has always had powerful teams and beating at the hands of Bossier City indicates either a weakened Tornado, or a mighty good Bossier City crew.

"Red" Knight, a fast stepping back, led the B. C. aggregation over Haynes-

LOUISIANA TECH GRIDMEN DISPLAY STEADY PROGRESS

Coach Joe Aillet To Stress Defensive Tactics In Drills This Week

RUSTON, La., Sept. 12.—(Special)—After several days of emphasizing offensive maneuvers, particularly in a general scrimmage Thursday afternoon, the Louisiana Tech football squad Monday will open their third week of drills with greater concentration upon the defensive side of the game, according to Head Coach Joe Aillet.

That the conditioning treatment to which the Techmen have been subjected since September 1 has been worthwhile is apparent to the Tech coaches, they say. Despite hot weather and hard contact work during much of the past week there are very few injuries among the Bulldogs as they come nearer their opener with the Texas College of Mines here on Friday night, September 25.

In a regulation practice game this week, a tentative first-string varsity eleven scored in two plays against the freshmen. The varsity men kept the ball moving credibly, in the opinion of Coach Aillet, but frequently missed blocking assignments and occasionally their ball handling was not much to brag about.

The upperclassmen on the offense in that scrimmage included Charlie Newman and Leonard Olsen, ends; Lucian Conway and George Doherty, tackles; Frank Bishop and Jerald Beasley, guards; Jim Allen, center; Johnny Perritt, left halfback; Ray Peace, right halfback; Eddie Harrelson, fullback, and Dean McBride, quarterback.

Statistics kept during the practice contest showed that Perritt averaged 14 yards per try, Peace eight yards per try, and Harrelson seven yards per try.

Sophomore Cale Martin, the giant tackle from Winnboro, was the stand-

TRIBESMEN HOLD GRID SCRIMMAGE

'Whites' Beat 'Golds,' Leave Coach Malone Beaming With Pride

A game-conditioning scrimmage, with all the trimmings featured yesterday's workout for the Northeast Junior college Indians, and Coach James L. Malone was beaming with pride at the close of the session which took place in sweltering weather with the Tribe prepping freely but doing their best to bat the ears off their opposing squadmen.

The "practice game" ended in a 7-to-0 victory for the "White" club which was captained by Jack Bishop, the fleet sophomore from Memphis, Tenn. But the score didn't decide anything, because the "Gold" eleven gave the "Whites" fits all the way through and twice penetrated the victors' 15-yard line only to be held for downs.

Bishop started the White touchdown drive with a 40-yard return of a punt. He tossed a pass to Hugh Taylor, six-foot-five end, for a first down on the Gold twelve. Bishop went off tackle for six more and then whipped a pass to Taylor in the end zone for the touchdown. Clem Welsh kicked the point from placement.

The White team got some good line blocking, particularly from Guards Tommy Sands and Joe Bob Tyler. The guards with Tackles Bill Edgar and Jim Abraham were also good defensively.

The Gold offense was chiefly long end sweeps with Clayton Brown carrying the mail for long gains. A pass combination of Brown to S. E. Holloway also kept the White defense busy. One such pass netted 55 yards and Holloway was robbed of a touchdown when Bishop hauled him down from behind.

The lineups for yesterday's scrimmage were:

The two-day workouts will continue until Wednesday.

The Tribe's first game will be played here September 25 with Kilgore Junior college of Kilgore, Texas.

Sports Roundup

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(Wide World)—There's bad news for college coaches in Secretary Stinson's statement that student members of the army enlisted reserve will be called when they reach draft age . . . And a lot of master-minds had practically worn themselves out getting athletes signed up in the reserves so they could stick around until graduation.

Service Dept.

In this department's first V-mail letter, Private Max E. R. Keiffer, writing from somewhere west of San Francisco, takes issue with our calling Stanford the national intercollegiate basketball champion . . . Private Keiffer's complaint is that Stanford never played in the national college tournament at Kansas City, where Hamline U. of St. Paul won the title, and is merely the M. C. A. A. champ . . . All we can say, Max, is that Hamline didn't play the bigger—and presumably tougher—universities in the N. C. A. A. tourney, either . . . Private Jimmy Pierce, Ford Sheridan, Ill., MP who was a good pro middleweight before he joined the army, has tossed out a challenge to Ray Robinson for a fight at Milwaukee . . . Freddie Fierro, Billy Conn's trainer, will join up right after the Conn-Louis scrap and is hoping he'll land in Billy's outfit.

Note Of Confidence

British sportsmen, who were peddling their race horses over here for fancy prices not so long ago, are in the market again . . . At the recent Newman sales, The Aga Khan, who sold Bahram for $250,000, paid $32,500 for a yearling owned by Marshall Field . . . And 50 gee-gees from the late Lord Glanville's stud brought $240,000, including a $26,000 sale of the three-year-old filly, Perfect Peace . . . And up at Saratoga a $1,000 yearling was something to holler about.

Odds—And Some Ends

Mushky Jackson, who has been in the fight racket for 28 years, is retiring to work in the shipyards—and he says it's patriotism, not dough, that inspired the move . . . Mel Harwood, former National Hockey league referee, is lining up a coast guard hockey team to play in Baltimore. Ace Coulter

MISSISSIPPI MAN FIGHTS TWO JAPS

GUADALCANAL, Solomon Islands, Aug. 14. — (Delayed) — (AP) — Sergeant Charles G. Arndt of Okolona, Miss., told how he shot it out with two Japanese, killing one of them, chasing the other away, during a marine night patrol in which only three Americans of a group of five came back alive.

Sent to a remote beach on Guadalcanal to locate the main center of enemy resistance, the party landed but was soon surrounded and badly outnumbered. Arndt was sent to work his way along the beach, swimming and crawling, for help.

Arndt swam some distance, clad only in field shoes and helmet. His pistol was tied to the chin strap of his helmet. Coming into shore he saw two Japs apparently waiting for him. He unstrapped his gun, felled one of the Japs with a good shot, and the other "ran like a scared rabbit."

The Mississippian stole a rowboat from a small Jap camp nearby and got in safely. It was too late for help to save the men, however, and only two others made their way separately back to the American lines.

SERVICE EMBLEM WILL BE GIVEN

Central Bank Will Donate Beautiful Trophy To Kin Of Service Men

Families with a relative in any branch of the United States armed forces may obtain a beautiful service emblem complimentary by calling in person at the Central Savings Bank & Trust Company.

If you have a son, brother, father or another relative serving the flag of our country you are entitled to display this emblem with its symbolic "service star" of blue. It is a mark of honor and you'll be proud to show this emblem from your front window, or it may be framed and displayed anywhere in your home.

The emblems are absolutely free and there is no advertising matter on them. They are being distributed by the Central Bank purely as a public service, and Mr. Washburn, vice-president of this bank, said "If we make a single mother or wife happy by presenting her with one of these beautiful posters our purpose will have been served."

These beautiful service emblems are in the nation's traditional colors of red, white and blue. One large blue star, accepted symbol of service, is set in a field of white and a flag border lends dignity and effect to the emblem. The words "We Serve" constitute the wording on the poster. It is lithographed on heavy, fine quality paper. The emblem measures 14 inches by 16 inches. Its colors will not fade and many families will wish to preserve it as an heirloom, and as a record of their service in this war. If you have a loved one in uniform

SCHOOL BELLS TO PEAL FORTH

End Of Summer Vacation Here; Many Changes In Faculties Here

School bells will peal forth in Monroe and elsewhere in Ouachita parish tomorrow for the first time since the close of school early in June. Both the Ouachita parish and city school systems will resume sessions and despite war conditions, it is expected that there will be a large registration.

Teaching lists have been revised by both systems as many teachers have removed, gone to war in some cases, and in still others have entered upon defense industrial jobs. Their places have been satisfactorily filled, stated the superintendents of the two systems.

The parish schools in Monroe and West Monroe will open at 8:30 a.m. central war time which is slightly later than was the case a year ago. The city schools are not as yet prepared to make changes in hours.

stated Superintendent E. L. Neville.

Neville high school will be open to all high school students and seventh grade pupils throughout the city.

Georgia Tucker school will be open to all pupils below the seventh grade residing north of Pine street. Pupils below the seventh grade residing between Pine and Washington street may attend either Georgia Tucker or Central Grammar school.

Central Grammar school will be open to all pupils below the seventh grade residing between Washington street and Ouachita avenue. Pupils who reside between Ouachita avenue and Morris avenue may attend either Central Grammar or Barksdall Faulk school.

Barksdall Faulk school will be open to all pupils below the eighth grade residing between Morris avenue and Dixie street.

Lida Benton school will be open to all pupils below the eighth grade residing below Dixie street.

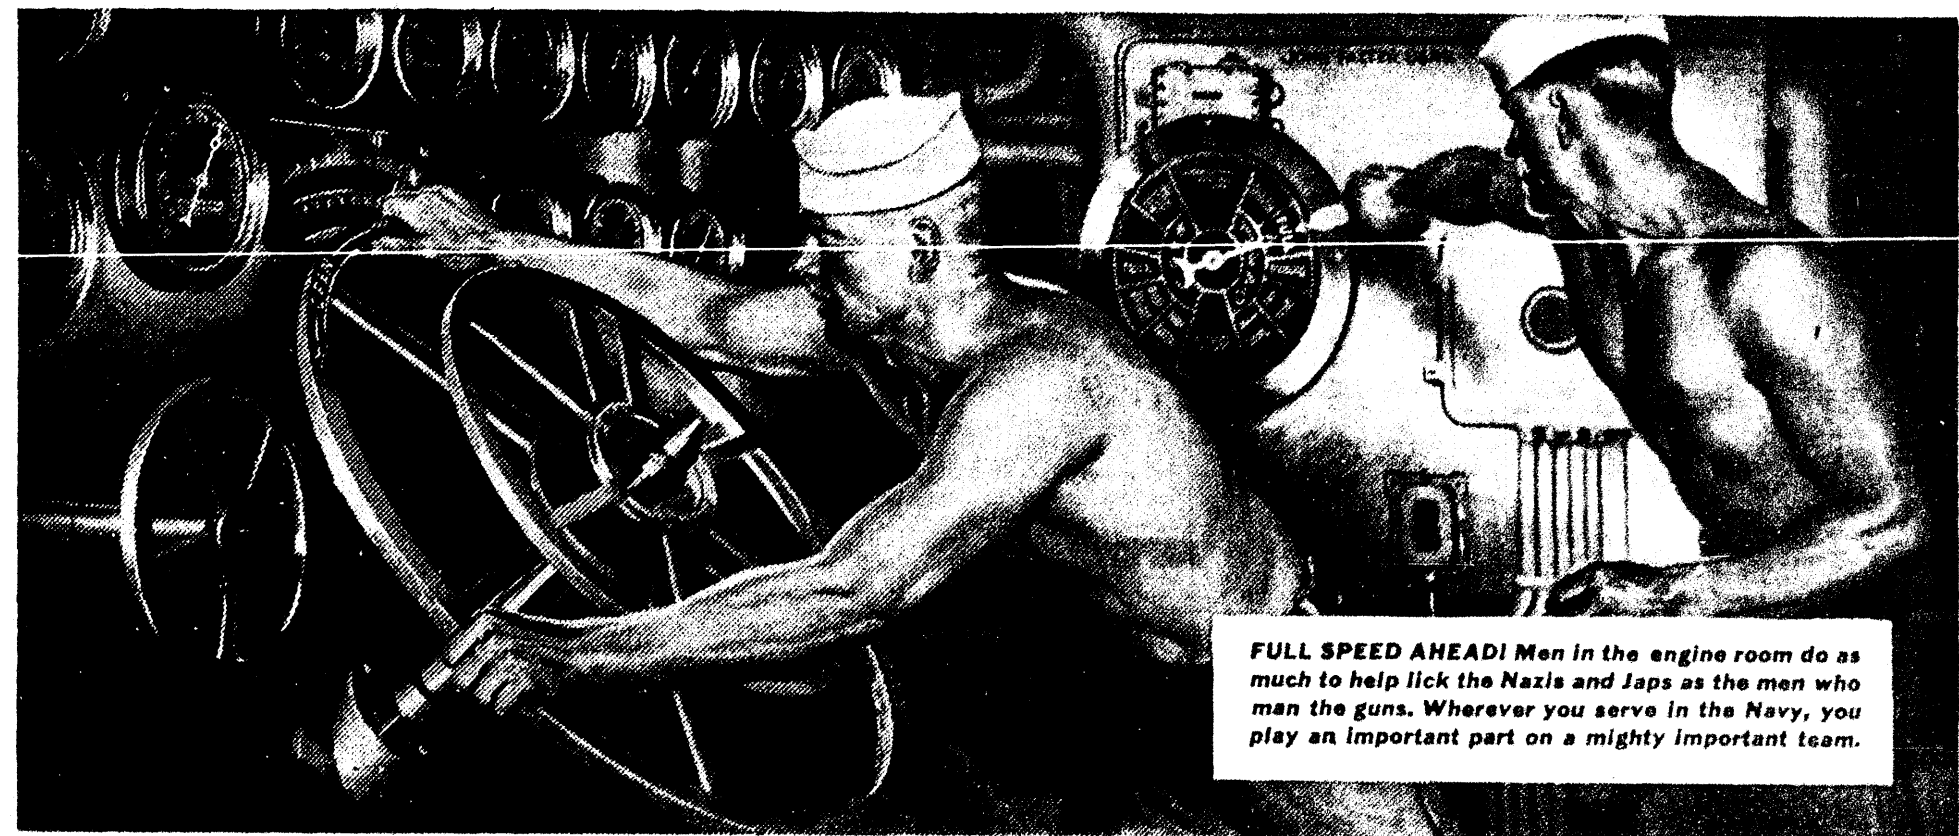

Pupils below the seventh grade who live nearer Sherrouse than any other school will attend that school.

AFTER CROSSING A STREAM WHICH SEEMS, INCREDIBLY, TO RUN UPHILL, FLASH AND HIS FRIENDS FIND THEMSELVES DRAWN INTO A TUNNEL AS IF BY A GREAT MAGNET. FLASH GRABS DALE AND CLINGS TO A ROCK AS DESIRA AND ZARKOV ARE SUDDENLY SWEEPED UPWARD BY SOME STRANGE FORCE!

UP THEY FLOAT TOWARD THE TOP OF THE TUNNEL: "WE HAVE NO WEIGHT!" EXCLAIMS ZARKOV. "THIS IS SOME AMAZING SORT OF SUSPENDED GRAVITY!"

THEN, WITH INCREASING SPEED, THE SCIENTIST AND QUEEN DESIRA "FALL UP" IN A HUDDLED HEAP TO THE CEILING OF THE TUNNEL. "ARE YOU HURT?" ZARKOV ASKS, AND DESIRA REPLIES IN A PUZZLED TONE: "NO, BUT I'M ALL MIXED UP--WE'RE STUCK UP HERE! WHAT IF WE FELL DOWN?"

ZARKOV'S SCIENTIFIC CURIOSITY IS GREATER THAN HIS NATURAL FEAR OF FALLING. GINGERLY, HE STANDS UP--UPSIDE DOWN! THEN, WITH FASCINATED AWE, HE SAYS: "THERE IS NO POSSIBLE MAGNETISM THAT COULD HOLD THE HUMAN BODY LIKE THIS--EXCEPT A CHANGE OF GRAVITY! WE CAN'T FALL!"

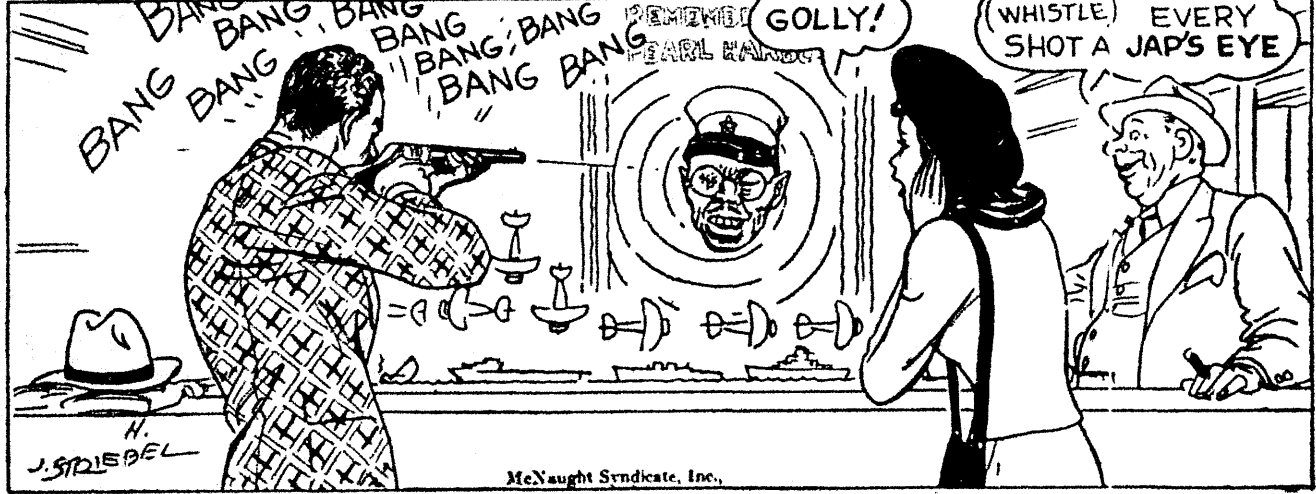

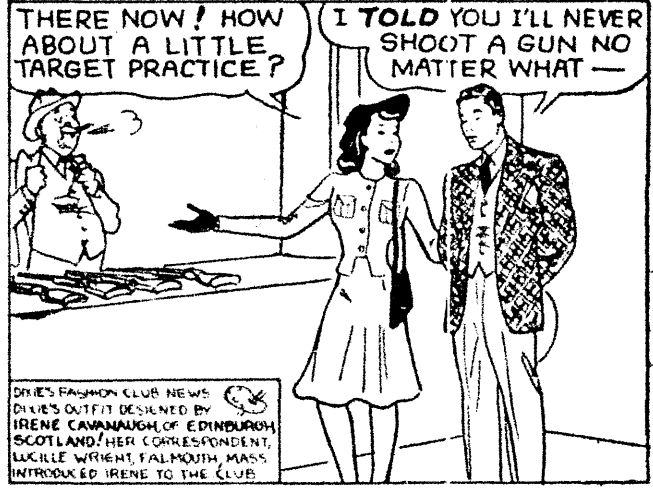

FLASH, DANGEROUSLY CLOSE TO THE POINT OF "NEUTRAL GRAVITY"--WHERE DESIRA AND ZARKOV STARTED FALLING UP--HOLDS DALE SAFELY BY CLUTCHING THE SIDE OF THE TUNNEL WALL. BUT AS HE WATCHES ZARKOV, HE SAYS: "DALE, ARE YOU GAME TO JOIN THEM?"

BAMBI'S ROMANCE WITH FALINE IS RUDELY INTERRUPTED BY THE CHALLENGE OF A RIVAL STAG! THEY BATTLE FURIOUSLY, THE FOREST RINGING WITH THE CRASH OF THEIR CHARGING ANTLERS!

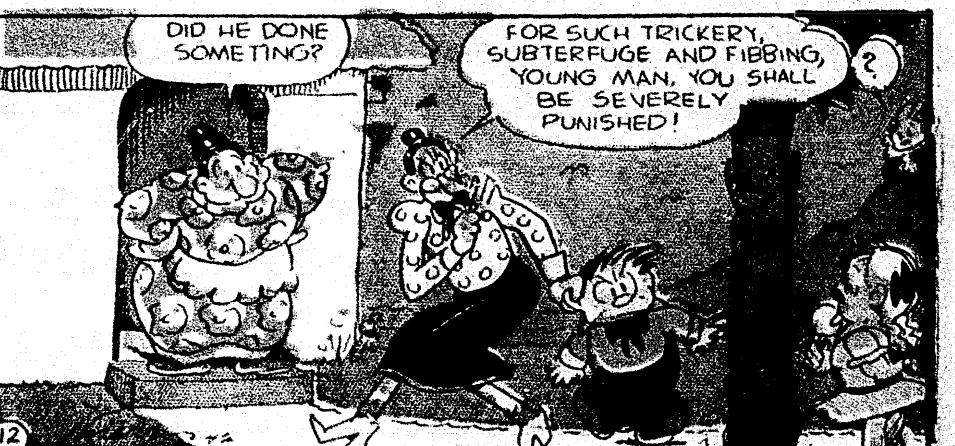

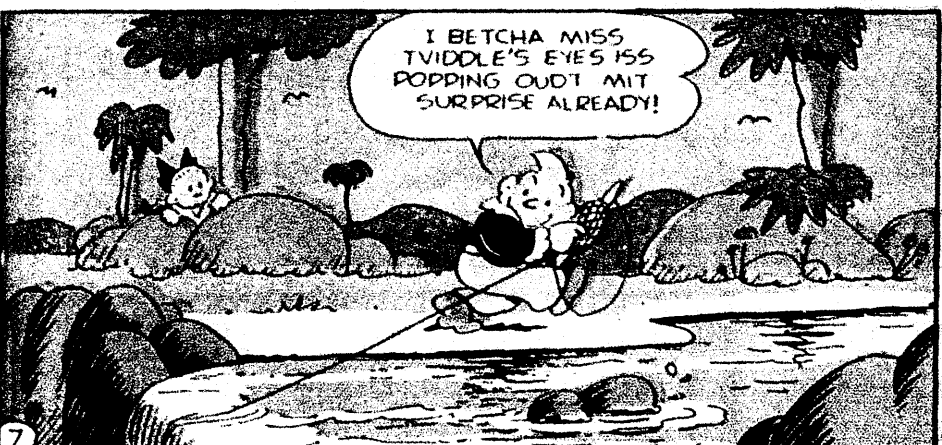

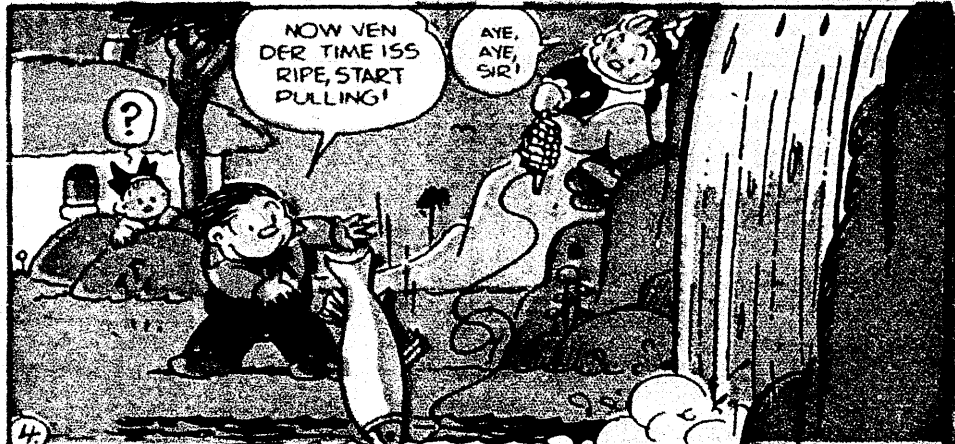

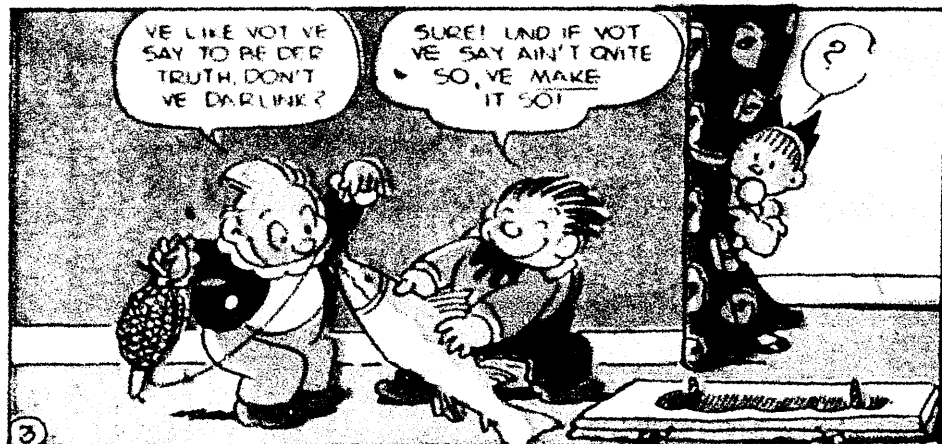

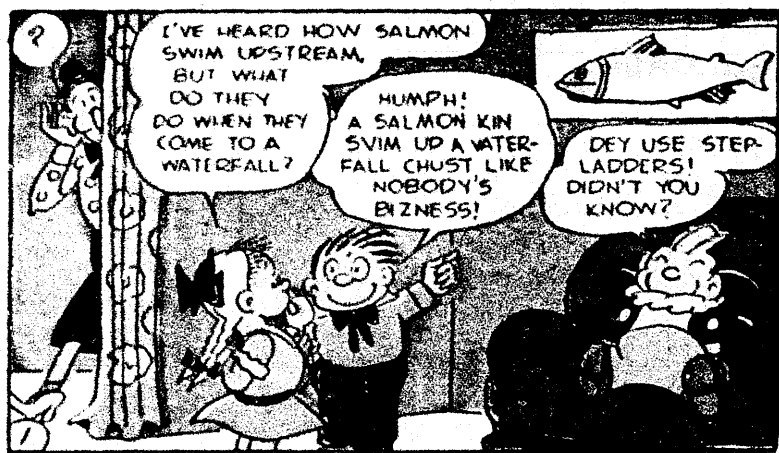

LIFE BECAME VERY BEAUTIFUL TO THEM, AND ALL THAT SPRING AND SUMMER NOTHING MARRED THEIR HAPPINESS. THEN EARLY ONE MORNING THE TANGY FALL AIR BROUGHT A SCENT BAMBI HAD LEARNED TO DREAD!

WE TOOK THE WRONG BRANCH OF THE RIVER. WE'RE UP AGAINST A WATER-WORKS INTAKE.

SAGE COUNTY WATER INTAKE

THE SUCTION IS TERRIFIC. WE CAN'T MOVE AWAY FROM THIS GRATING.

HEY, BAGGO! COME BACK HERE!

THE CURRENT'S TOO STRONG. HE'LL NEVER BE ABLE TO SWIM AGAINST IT.

IF ONLY WE'D KEPT THIS RAFT IN THE MAIN CHANNEL.

IT WAS TOO DARK. WE COULDN'T SEE.

BAGGO! HE CAN'T MAKE IT!

YOU SEE, CONSTABLE, WE WERE STAYING AT THE CREST POINT HOTEL. WE HEARD THEIR CRIES. THEY'RE TRAPPED AGAINST THE NEW WATER INTAKE.

THEY'RE CROOKS AND MURDERERS.

WELL, WHAT DO YOU WANT ME TO DO?

LISTEN, AND LISTEN CLOSELY. THIS IS OUR PLAN.

BAGGO'S GONE, BOSS! HE'S GONE!

WHAT CAN WE DO -- HEY, HELP!!

YOU SEE, WE SAW THEM, BUT THEY DIDN'T SEE US.

NOW DO YOUR STUFF.

I HEARD SOMEONE! LISTEN!

HELLO, DOWN THERE. GRAB THIS ROPE.

THAT'S IT! TIE IT UNDER YOUR ARMS. I'LL DRAG YOU UP ONE AT A TIME.

ATTA BOY!

WELL, LET'S GO UP! WHY DID YOU STOP?

OH, HEL-LO, MR. LILLY. SURPRISED TO SEE ME?

YI-YI! IT'S HER!

IT'S FRIZZLETOP!

IF HE TRIES TO CRAWL UP, JUST CUT THE ROPE, MISS. I'LL GO GET US MORE HELP.
